Balkans 'Watchdog' Commission Approved By Committee of U. N.

Vote on Charges Against Greece's Neighbors Delayed Amid Bitter Words

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.,
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 8.—In the face of shrill cries of "blackmail" from Russia, the Assembly's Political Committee of 57 nations rolled up top-heavy majorities today to set up a special commission in Greece to watch the northern border.

It was the first dramatic proof that the Assembly was willing and able to act where the Security Council from setting up the same kind of commission in troubled Greece.

This time the Russians and their friends were helpless, except to shout objections, one being a charge of "cowardice" at the United States. In 10 successive votes, the non-Soviet strength never fell below 34 nations and the Soviet strength never rose above the usual six. Once the vote against Russia went as high as 40.

Other Half Postponed

On every vote the Arab bloc, the three Scandinavian countries and India abstained. Otherwise the Soviet group found itself without aid or comfort from any quarter.

The voting, however, carried out only one half of the proposals on the Greek issue made by Secretary of State George Marshall at the opening of this Assembly. The other half—a condemnation of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania for helping the Greek guerillas—was postponed until the three northern neighbors of Greece say whether they intend to cooperate with the proposed commission. If they give an unsatisfactory answer, the United States and its friends are ready to go ahead with a vote of "guilty."

Andrei Vishinsky was rounsed to fury by the decision to vote on the special commission before voting on the guilt of Greece's three northern neighbors.

Illegal, Says Vishinsky

He shouted that it was an illegal and unfair "ultimatum" to ask the three Balkan countries for an answer before going ahead with the condemnation.

"Go ahead with your resolution, Mr. Johnson, "he declared, turning to Herschel V. Johnson, American delegate.

"Go ahead; you may have no doubt that you will get your customary majority: But why you show such cowardice as to lay down a sine qua non condition? Delegates here will understand the false and undignified position in which they are being placed by this horse-trade."

All these fireworks got Vishinsky nowhere except to solidify the committee against him. A similar effect was produced by the excitable Ales Bebler of Yugoslavia, who challenged the fairness of the rulings of Chairman Joseph Bech of Luxembougr. Bech answered him by calling for a vote of confidence, in which he got the unanimous backing of the committee, with only Vishinsky and Bebler and their few allies abstaining.

Need Two-Thirds Vote

Today's votes in the political committee must be ratified by a two-thirds majority of the full Assembly before they can become effective. In some cases, the committee's votes fell just short of two-thirds and in others they exceeded it, but the Americans were confident tonight that some of today's abstainers would vote with them when the issue reached the Assembly floor.

The procession began today, in fact, when the Swedes bowed to the majority and withdrew their proposed compromise resolution to omit condemnation and authorize the commission to study con-

Romanians Provide Supplies, Clothing, to Greek Guerillas

Bucharest, Romania, Oct. 8 (AP).—Georgei Apostel, president of the Romanian Confederation of Labor, and chairman of the Romanian national committee for relief of "democratic Greece," announced tonight that a shipment of medical supplies and clothing would be sent to the guerillas fighting Greek army troops in northern Greece within two weeks.

[Apostel's statement was believed to be the first open announcement that persons in Russian satellite countries were giving aid to the guerillas seeking to overthrow the Greek government. The Greeks have charged repeatedly in the United Nations that Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania, also Russian satellites, were aiding the guerillas.]

Guerilla General Vifiades, who goes under the name Markos, issued a proclamation August 16 calling for an end to the Greek Monarchy, and the freeing of Greece from what he described as "foreigners and foreign interests." He announced he had assumed all authority in guerilla-held areas of Greece, until a "provisional democratic government" is formed.

At that time diplomats said establishment of a separatist Communist state would be highly advantageous to Russia and her satellites, which then would be in a position to lend direct military aid to the guerilla cause.

The United States has granted approximately 300 million dollars worth of aid to the regularly constituted Greek government, to build up the nation's economy and armed forces. Bitter fighting between Greek troops and Markos' guerillas has been in progress for months.

Padway Dies After Collapse At Convention

AFL General Counsel Stricken on Stage Addressing Delegates

San Francisco, Oct. 8 (AP).—Joseph A. Padway, general counsel of the American Federation of Labor, died of a stroke tonight a few hours after collapsing during an address before the AFL's international convention.

His physician attributed death to a stroke.

A physician who made an early examination tentatively diagnosed the attack as a recurrence of a stomach disorder. He was hospitalized several months after a simlar attack in Milwaukee.

Pawday first was taken to his hotel room, but later in the day removed to the hospital.

At his bedside were his wife and a brother, I. B. Padway, San Francisco 'labor attorney. The brother said Padway has been suffering high blood pressure stomach ulcers for nearly a year.

Padway has been ill much of the past year.

He has fought labor's legal battles since 1915, when he became general counsel of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor. He was the author of much labor legislation in that State. In 1925 he was appointed judge of the Civil Court of Milwaukee County. He resigned in 1927.

The English-born attorney became general counsel of the AFL in 1938. He also represented a number of international unions affiliated with the federation.

He was born in Leeds, Yorkshire, England, July 25, 1891, of Jewish parentage. He was educated in English schools and obtaine dhis degree in law at Marquette University.

Hypodermics By Airgun Shown Here

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

An airgun which shoots insulin and other medicines painlessly into the human body was demonstrated here yesterday for the first time publicly.

The medical weapon is designed to eliminate painful injections by hypodermic needles and syringes, but its potentialities are "limited only t othe ingenuity of man," said its demonstrator.

Dr. Edward B. Tuohy, professor of anesthesiology at Georgetown University School of Medicine, introduced the flashlight-sized instrument to physicians attending the eighteenth annual scientific assembly at the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

The demonstration removed most of the security wraps from the private medical project, kept hush-hush for the past year during its development lest it fall into unscrupulous hands.

"It could easily become a lethal weapon in the hands of a criminal," said Dr. Tuohy.

The instrument, called a hypospray, blasts liquid injection through the skin without pain and, in most cases, without a mark of

Robot Plane Test Of Sonic Barrier Is Inconclusive

Padstow, England, Oct. 8 (AP).—A small robot rocket plane, built to fly 900 miles an hour, streaked vertically into the sea today after being launched from a Mosquito bomber.

British scientistss cautiously refused to comment "for at least a week"—until they can examine radar pictures and the data recorded by radio from instruments aboard the robot—on whether the plane actually passed through the mysterious "sonic barrier" of piled-up air believed to be encountered at very high speeds.

One observer said it appeared to be a "reasonable assumption" that it did crash through.

The speed of sound waves varies from about 660 miles an hour at sea level to 760 miles per hour at 30,000 feet altitude.

The robot, 11 feet long with a "skin" of polished mahogany, was launched at an altitude of 36,000 feet and glided for only 15 seconds before turning its nose down just as its 2,000 horsepower alcohol-burning motor belched its first puff of smoke.

Reds Fight Recovery, Says Lovett

Parley at Warsaw And Its Manifesto Regarded by U. S. As Official Acts

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Governments which took part in the Warsaw Communist conference have made clear their intention to prevent European recovery, Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett said yesterday.

Lovett left no doubt that the State Deparment looks on the conference and the resulting manifesto as official acts of the nine governments involved and not merely acts of the Communist Party. The Department, he said, "has noted that responsible cabinet ministers of certain countries, including the Soviet Union" were present at the meeting.

"Maligned" America

The menifesto issued by the conference, Lovett said, "maligned the aims of the American and British people in the recent war and carried to new lengths the distortions of United States policy" which recently have filled the Soviet press. He warned the people of Europe that if they permitted themselves to be "misled by these malicious and unscrupulous distortions" they would be taking "a heavy responsibility" for "economic disaster in Europe."

At the same time, Attorney General Clark described the new Comintern formed at Warsaw as no more than a "revival" of the old Comintern whose dissolution Marshal Stalin announced in 1943. In a speech at Boston, Clark said that if Communist leaders imagined they had "alarmed" the United States they were "badly fooled."

Their "shrill, hysterical call," he declared, would spur this Nation to redouble its efforts to carry out the Truman Doctrine.

Asks Coal Judgments

Lovett's statement issued at a news conference, called on the people of the United States to exercise "coolness and clarity of judgment" and to refuse to be "deflected from the course we have chosen." This Nation must, he declared, "continue to study with sympathey but with calm realism the problem of how Europe can be assisted to regain its proper place in a stable and peaceful world."

"The Department," he said, "has examined carefully the material which has appeared in the Soviet press concerning the recent meting in Poland of representatives to establish in Belgrade an information bureau consisting of representatives of the centarl committees of the Communist Parties of these countries.

The department has noted that responsible cabinet ministers of certain countries, including the

O'Conor Vote Irregularities Put at 700

20,000 Challenged Ballots to Undergo Scrutiny by Senate Investigating Group

By The Associated Press

Attorneys will complete their review of contested ballots in Maryland's disputed 1946 senatorial election in three weeks, Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) said yesterday, and challenged ballots will be sent here "for committee action.

Jenner, chairman of the Elections Subcommittee of the Senate Rules Committee which authorized the recount said he expects about 20,000 questioned ballots from 17 counties to be referred to his group.

This would be in addition to 6624 contested ballots in five counties previously ruled on by the subcommittee. No announcement has been made concerning these ballots.

D. John Markey, a Republican, who lost to Senator O'Conor, Democrat and former Governor, by an official State margin of 2232, asked the recount, charging errors and irregularities.

Markey picked up 426 votes early in the year in a recheck of voting-machine totals in the city of Baltimore and Montgomery County.

Jenner's statement said the recount and investigation in the 17 counties now being studied has uncovered about 700 "irregularities," such as failure of election clerks to sign poll books properly, improper initialing of ballots and improper use of seals on ballot boxes.

5 Planes Rushed To Aid of Oiler Disabled in Gale

New York, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—An Army transport and five Army planes sped today to the assistance of the United States Army oiler Y-88 which radioed that it was disabled in a northerly gale about 500 miles from St. Johns, Newfoundland, the Army reported here.

The 182-foot ship, with a crew of 19 under Capt. John Knott of Bloomfield, N. J., was en route from Goose Bay, Labrador, to St. John's when it messaged that one engine was out, another functioning improperly and that steering was difficult.

Distillers to Shut Down 2 Months, Surrender Grain to Government

U. S. to Recommend Like Move Abroad; 10-20 Million Bushel Saving Is Expected

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's distillers will stop making both beverage liquors and industrial alcohol for 60 days, beginning within three weeks, Charles Luckman, chairman of the Citizens Food Committee announced last night.

Although only 18 out of 39 of the Nation's distillers represented at a 2-hour session agreed to the 60-day holiday, the remaining 21 agreed to present the proposal favorably to their directors. Luckman declared he was "confident" all would agree to the shutdown.

In addition they agreed to surrender all grain they now have in stocks or in future contracts for sale to the Government.

The total amount to be saved by the shutdown, Luckman estimated, would be from "10 to 20 million bushels."

Luckman agreed on the part of the Administration that no request for an extension of the shutdown beyond 60 days would be made.

Further Requests Possible

He added, however, that he "was not able to make any commitment that no further conservation of grain would be requested, but agreed to advise the industry on the food emergency as it progresses."

He also presented an exchange of letters between John R. Steelman, presidential assistant, and Attorney General Tom C. Clark in which the latter assured the industry that any joint action taken would not be used as the basis for legal action under the anti-trust laws.

Luckman anticipated objections from the distillers to the proposal by a dramatic appeal for assistance in the present emergency.

He told them of having just arrived from his home in Boston, where he had been called by an emergency operation on one of his sons.

While there, he said, he had talked to the general manager of Lever Brothers, Inc., the soap company of which he is the $300,000-a-year president.

A Blow at Soap Industry

"He told me," Luckman said, "that President Truman's proposal of Sunday night was going to disturb Lever's operations." The appeal to fatten livestock to lighter weights would cut down the supplies of tallow and other fats the company requires for making soap, and thus add to "our already difficult operations."

"They were enthusiastic about the opportunity to cooperate with the President," Luckman said of the distillers' meeting.

He told them that he had assurances from the Government departments handling the grain export program that:

1. None of the grain to be exported would be used for any other purpose than human consumption.

2. Every effort will be made to get all countries either participating in or benefiting from the export program to adopt similar restrictions on their distillers, Luckman added, to the press, that this would include other exporting countries such as Canada.

Distillers on Committee

In addition he agreed to set up a committee of distillers, Government officials and the Citizens Food Committee to (1) set the date for the shutdown, and (2) consider any cases of hardship on any distillers due to the program.

There was no dissenting vote, Luckman declared, although The Washington Post learned that among those who withheld final answer until Monday were four of the Nation's largest operators.

First Poultryless Day Poses Problem for Restaurateurs

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

At least another week is required before Greater Washington area restaurants can comply with meatless Tuesday and poultryless Thursday food-saving recommendations.

This was the statement of Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, as he completed another day of conferring with officials of the National Citizens Food Committee to obtain clarification of several directives.

Several restaurants indicated they would serve poultry and eggs today. They explained the association had not advised them on how to comply with the President's request.

Wilson said such an association directive "may be issued by Friday." A few eating-place managers said they "could not afford to stop serving poultry" today if their "competitor down the street" continued to do so.

Wilson admitted frankly that many restaurants had been seeking guidance on how to proceed today, but that he was "trying not to give advice, except to tell them to do the best they can to cooperate."

Poultry and egg wholesalers said sales were slow yesterday, but added that the market has been rather static for the past three weeks.

Plane's Flip Stands 53 on Their Heads

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 8 (U.P.).—A four-engined American Airlines flagship went momentarily out of control today and flew upside down over El Paso, striking terror to 48 passengers and inflicting what were described as minor injuries to six

Capt. Charles Sisto, pilot, managed to right the airliner and landed it safely at the El Paso municipal airport minutes later.

The plane was en route from Dallas to Los Angeles.

Five crew members were aboard. Included in the 48 passengers was Charles H. Colvin of Washington, a member of President Truman's air policy committee.

Virtually all of the 48 passengers suffered bruises and shock. Six were treated by a physician.

All of the passengers except two—one who canceled his ticket and another who remained for further medical treatment — boarded another airliner.

Sisto said the plane went into its caper at 8000 feet when it started a sharp climb.

He said he adjusted the automatic pilot but it failed to halt the climb. He then began struggling with the manual controls. While he was fighting to control

Pilotless Flight Hailed as Air Advance

8000-Mile Automatic Trip Won't Expedite Push-Button War

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Wilmington, Ohio, Oct. 8.—Air Force Materiel Command officials hail the transatlantic round-trip flight of their Skymaster robot plane as an aviation milestone, but declare the "push-button flight" has little or nothing to do with "push-button war."

The four-engined C-54—called the "Big Push"—arrived home today from its 8000-mile history-making automatic flight to England and back.

Ranking officers concerned with the development of the plane with the "mechanical brain" feel that it will be of great importance to future military and civil aviation. But to keep the record straight, they set forth certain things that it is and certain things it is not.

Neither Secret, Nor Weapon

First, it is not a "secret weapon."

Col. W. Francis Taylor, deputy chief of the Air Force All-Weather Flying Center, which designed and operates the craft, says it is neither secret, nor is it a weapon.

"They had Scotland Yard put a special guard on the plane in England" he declares: "But we had told them that there was no secret equipment aboard. All of it is under public patent."

Second—It is not the forerunner of a robot plane that will carry an A-bomb halfway across the world and blast an enemy industrial center. At leat its designers see no such prospective use of their work.

Col. Ben S. Kelsey, deputy commander of the Material Command, who helped "father" the automon, says some of the lessons learned may help in the develipment of guided missiles.

Goal All-Weather Flying

But the latter work is handled by others operating secretly at other bases. The "Big Push" is concerned with making all-weather flight a reality.

Third, the experts here at the All-Weather Flying Center are not interested in perfecting fully automatic flight as a normal thing. They don't expect ever to send commercial transports or cargo

Boy, 2½, Burned By Five Gallons Of Grease, Dies

C. Richard Gorham, 2½, who was scalded by hot frying grease in a roadside diner operated by his parents Tuesday, died at 4:30 a. m. yesterday at Alexandria Hospital.

The child climbed a chair next to the stove, fell and in falling grabbed the handle of a pot fiilled with sizzling grease. The grease poured down over the boy's head and body. A neighbor said the pan contained 5 gallons of the hot liquid.

The mother was in the kitchen at the time but was unable to prevent the tragedy. She suffered second degree burns of her hands in trying to save her son. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gorham, had been operating Uhl's Diner, on Route 1, 4 miles south of Alexandria, for about a month.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Cunningham's Funeral Home, Alexandria, with burial in Bethel Cemetery.

Bloodhound Finds Lost Babe in the Wood . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Tight Lid on Aid Predicted by Taft

Congress Unlikely to Exceed Annual Limit 4½ Billions for Europe, Senator Says

Des Moines, Oct. 8 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), today expressed doubt that Congress would approve more than $4,500,000,000 a year for foreign relief under the Marshall Plan.

At the same time the Senate majority leader said that when Congress reconvenes it should take steps to reduce Federal taxes by more than three billion dollars a year.

In a speech to the Iowa Bankers Association, Taft said such a tax cut still would leave two billion dollars available for reduction of the national debt. Two five billion tax reduction bills were passed by the last Congress but vetoed by President Truman.

Taft declared that by 1950 "foreign loans should be entirely eliminated as far as the Government budget is concerned."

"We have already authorized four billion dollars for Europe for this fiscal year," Taft said. "I doubt if the increase of actual expenditures during the year will be more than another half billion.

"Peace Economy" by 1950

"The Marshall Plan for the most part is a proposal that we continue our huge present assistance for three or four years to come. Insofar as any increase over the present rate of assistance is suggested by the published proposals they are not likely to be approved by Congress."

"Looking forward to 1950 when perhaps we can hope for a peace economy," he continued, ". . . foreign loans should be entirely eliminated as far as the Goverament budget is concerned."

He said tax reduction should be one of the first things the next Congress should consider.

Declaring that the tax burden, if high enough, must lead directly to socialism, Taft told the bankers:

"I believe that the very existence of the present tax burden is a serious threat to the continuation of our whole system.

Prompt Tax Action Favored

"When Congress returns to Washington, tax reduction should be one of its first considerations. The House Ways and Means Committee is engaged in a general study of the personal income tax so that the reduction may not take exactly the form of this year's bill but one way or another I believe to be so dangerous."

Taft estimated that present taxes eat up 30 per cent of the national income.

"In my opinion," he added, "the time has come when we should determine how heavy a tax burden is reasonably safe and then cut our expenditures down to the probable receipts."

'Denial' Menu Makes British Envy America

London, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—America's new 'meatless' menus made odd reading today for housewives waiting in a bareshelved British grocery.

The News Chronicle, reprinting the 'meatless' suggestions of President Truman, listed "lunch today—grapefruit, cheese souffle, buttered peas, grilled tomatoes, chocolate pudding."

Grocer Cyril Fletcher scratched his head sadly.

"We had some grapefruit last spring," he said. "Souffle? You've had your egg and your ounce of cheese for this week. There aren't any peas. Tomatoes you can have, and chocolate pudding, too—if you've got the milk."

The grocer was a bit more helpful with the dinner suggested for today—clear chicken soup, salmon steak, potatoes, string beans, eggplant, salad and peaches.

"We've got soup, but it won't be chicken," Fletcher said. "We've got fish, but it won't be salmon. Potatoes and string beans, yes. And salad and peaches, if there are any left. Eggplant? I never heard of that."

The News Chronicle explained that an eggplant was "a fleshy fruit, resembling a potato."

"Would you settle for another potato?" asked Fletcher hopefully

He looked at tomorrow's dinner menu—melon, baked ham, sweet potatoes, asparagus, cauliflower, salad and coffee mallow.

"We've got melon and some salad greens," he said. "No baking ham since before the war. No sweet potatoes and no asparagus. The cauliflower season ended last week. What's 'coffee mallow'?"

According to the News Chronicle, it was made of marshmallows, a cup of heavy cream, a cup of coffee and half a spoonful of vanilla.

"King George himself couldn't get a cup of heavy cream," Fletcher snorted. "We've got coffee and vanilla, but no marshmallows."

"I'll take vanilla," an American said. But nobody laughed.

France Sees Dollar End Oct. 15

By The Associated Press

A high French official said last night that France is facing "a very tragic moment" and will exhaust all her dollar resources within a week unless outside aid is forthcoming.

Harvey Alphand, France's director of economic affairs, told newsmen that without help, France will have to discontinue all purchases of American wheat, coal and fats around October 15.

If American wheat supplies are shut off, he said, the French people as a whole will go without bread more than two days a week. And the big cities will have no bread at all, he declared.

Alphand also disclosed that France tried to obtain grain from Russia six weeks ago, but the plea has met only silence from Moscow.

He said the French government has notified the State Department of the crisis, and hopes to get dollars from several sources to avoid a complete stoppage of United States supplies.

Turkish Chief of Staff Salih Omurtak told a news conference that the 100-million-dollar American aid program for Turkey might not be enough "if the strength of the opponents we may have against is is considered."

Without mentioning Russia, he said Turkey is still prepared "to ward off aggression."

Eisenhower Ticket Would Win Easily, Wallace Declares

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 8 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace expressed the belief today that a Republican ticket with General Eisenhower as the presidential nominee and Harold Stassen as his running mate would win the 1948 election "overwhelmingly."

Wallace expressed the belief also that General Eisenhower would likewise "win overwhelmingly" if he ran as the Democratic nominee. But he quickly added that he expected President Truman to get the nomination.

Lowly Spud Will Fill Gaps In Eggless Thursday Menus

By Lucia Brown
Post Reporter

The chicken and the egg—to say nothing of turkeys, ducks, and assorted fowl—will be missed today, but their absence isn't posing much of a problem except at breakfast time.

Since eggs and breakfast are considered synonymous by many, there undoubtedly are complaints around some family tables this first eggless Thursday morning. Wise homemakers are meeting them by passing the potato cakes, fried apples, fish balls, or other dishes made with plentiful food.

Dinner tonight won't be hard to plan, though a little figuring may be necessary to avoid including muffins, cakes, and other dishes that have several eggs among their ingredients. Of course, points such as saving a slice of bread a day have to be considered and there's no need to forget meat-saving cookery methods just because poultry and eggs are today's only taboos.

Stews, meat loaves, stuffed vegetables, and similar combination dishes are still the most economical ways of spreading out expensive meat. Then, too, if we're lavish in our use of meat today, poultryless and eggless Thursday won't add up to much in the way of saving grain, the ultimate aim of most of the conservation effort.

Tomato Soup
Potatoes Filled with Link Sausage
Spinach
Buttered Beets
Bread (Minimum Desired)
Apple Tart, Topped with Whipped Cream

Milk for the children, tea or coffee for the grown-ups.

To prepare the potato dish, wash small potatoes of uniform size and grease them with lard. Cut a hole through the length of each with an apple corer. Fill holes with link sausages or sausage meat. Bake until done (about 1 hour) in a moderate oven (375°).

18 Distillers To Shut Down

National Distillers, Seagrams, Hiram Walker and Schenley.

Before the meeting several distillers admitted that the Government held a "big stick" over them. The law requires that no distillery or alcohol plant can be operated without Government "storekeeper gaugers" on duty to check operations. Many plants have not been operating at full capacity because of a shortage of trained gaugers. It is within the power of the Treasury Department to withdraw temporarily, perhaps for a period of 60 days, all gaugers, which would bring an automatic shutdown.

Another lift to th egrain conservation campaign was given yesterday when the big farm organizations agreed to urge their members to cut down feeding of grains to livestock.

The National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, presented a statement, which Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said the National Farmers Union would support, urging a five-point program of conservation:

1. To feed more roughage to livestock in areas of abundant supply, in place of grain.
2. To market hogs at lighter weights to conserve corn.
3. To feed less grain to beef cattle.
4. To practice closer culling of nonproductive dairy herds and poultry flocks, weeding out small milk-producers from the former and eg layers from among hens.
5. To eliminate feed grain losses by careful harvesting and storage.

Secretary Anderson told the National Press Club at noon that this country must continue large exports of grain to western Europe for many years, unless Russia's political and economic wall through central Europe can be broken down.

"It so happens," he said, "that the principal grain production areas of Europe, western Germany, Poland and the Great Danube Basin are within the Russian zone, while the food-deficit areas are in the American, British and French zones."

He added that Russia had "been smarter" than we had in setting up its occupied areas. The only alternative, he said, to continuing exports on a large scale in an effort to rebuild the western European economy is to withdraw from Europe entirely.

In answer to questioners, he declared that in his opinion a system of price control and rationing of food could not be set up in time to meet the present emergency. He declared that the American people would stand for such controls during wartime, but after the war demanded to be freed of them. In one two-week period just before controls were removed, he said, more than 2000 OPA boards "folded up." He quoted Chester Bowles former OPA director, as saying at that time that controls could no longer be maintained.

In response to another question, Anderson declared that the supplies of eggs in storage were smaller than usual at this time of year. He denied reports that the Government was "hoarding" eggs, and declared:

"We don't regard as surplus food that which is bought up during the flush seasons and then channeled back into normal trade during lean seasons."

He declared the Government is not now buying eggs.

The Nation's distillers will meet in Chicago tomorrow to determine what action they may take in response to the President's plea to conserve grain. The result of their conference will be made known to the Citizens Committee Monday, Luckman said last night.

First Poultryless Day Poses Problem for Restaurateurs

However, one firm, the Chicken Hut at 427 11th st. nw., said the 27 varieties of chicken usually on the menu will be removed today, in favor of steak, chops and other meats. Sixty per cent of daily sales there are for chicken, an official reported.

The policy taken by the specialty houses follows the one prevailing on meatless Tuesday, when most steak and hamburger houses continued offering their most popular items.

Wilson said there was "no doubt" about the association supporting the presidential food saving program. He added, however, that it "was never in favor of meatless days," but instead preferred "seven days a week saving."

Short Notice Hit

As an example of clarification necessary, Wilson said the national committee has been asked to declare restaurants may use eggs in baking, preparing salad or in egg custard on poultryless Thursdays and whether brains or scrapple may be served on meatless Tuesdays.

Part of the problem involved in gaining full-scale compliance with the saving measures is the shortness of notice received of the two austerity days, Wilson said.

Support for the food saving program came yesterday from:

The Hecht Co. store cafeterias, which serve 2000 meals daily; the three local units of Nedick's, which will observe the Tuesday and Thursday requests and also eliminate the sale of three-decker sandwiches; the District department of the American Legion, which called on members to save bread; the B'nai B'rith, which asked its members to obey the recommendations, and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which urged churches to "seize the moral initiative" in the program.

Thorp Assails Reds As 'Inconsistent'

Rebukes Communists On Charge U. S. Aids Reich Domination

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Soviet criticism of American aid to other countries is based on propaganda that the United States is wrong no matter what it does, Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State, told the United Nations Economic Commission today.

So severe has been the drain in providing assistance, the United States is "considering the possibility" of reimposing "certain" wartime controls, Thorp said. He did not elaborate on the type being studied, but indicated they included allocations, priorities or export controls.

He rebuked the Communists for their claims that the United States is helping recovery of Germany to permit its dominance of other countries. That "is just too fantastic to deserve comment," he said.

Thorp opposed Russian attempts to have the United States rebuked for giving aid to other countries without United Nations supervision, and proposed instead that the 16 nations participating in the Marshall Plan be congratulated "for such a remarkable demonstration of economic cooperation."

Lumping together all the criticisms of American aid made by the Soviet bloc, Thorp replied:

"If we do not provide extensive aid, ye are told that we are heartless and irresponsible; if we do give assistance, then we are acting politically and invading the sovereignty of other."

These inconsistencies and their lack of basis in "any known facts," he said, "stem from the curious assumption that every act or failure to act by the United States is . . . wrong." They seem "calculated to achieve a minimum of economic cooperation."

The charter makes no provisions for the Russian assertion that aid to other countries can be given only through the United Nations, he said.

Charles Malik of Lebanon, spoke for the Arab League in seeking an economic commission by the United Nations to hep industrialize the Near East. He warned that unless the Near East is "industrialized and strong" the countries there contain the seeds of another war.

New 'Unification' Insignia Approved

The Seal

The Flag

President Truman yesterday approved the design of the Seal of Office of the National Military Establishment and of a Flag for the Secretary of National Defense. Creation of an approved seal of office is mandatory under the National Security Act of 1947 which unified the fighting services.

The seal displays an American eagle facing to the right, with horizontal wings. The eagle grasps thre crossed arrows, symbolic of the three component parts of the National Military Establishment.

When the seal is displayed in color, the background is to be of medium blue with the eagle and wreath in natural colors and the arrows, stars and rays of gold.

Austrian Oil Share Offered To Russia

Vienna, Oct. 8.—Russia today was offered shares in the Austrian oil industry and in the Danube shipping company, plus a cash settlement, if it would agree to give up its other claims to what it regards as German assets in Austria.

The offer was made by the French delegation in the Austrian treaty commission in an effort to break the deadlock in negotiations for a peace treaty in Austria.

The surprise offer was known to have active American and British support. An American spokesman said it had been necessary to "examine other possibilities for settlement" in view of the failure of the treaty commission to agree on a definition of German assets in Austria which Russia is to get as reparations.

The treaty commission completed five months of discussions today. So far, it has accomplished few tangible results. The commission's work probably will end Friday, and its reports will be submitted to the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers when the council meets in London next month.

U. S. Civilian Rule In Reich Seen as Calamity by Cox

Representative Cox (D., Ga.) said yesterday that replacement of the Army by civilians in the occupied zone of Germany would be "calamitous."

Europe, he said, is filled with rumors that Gen. Lucius D. Clay wants to retire and the State Department wishes to substitute civilian control for military. Either would be "terrible," he declared.

"There is lots of suffering everywhere,' said Cox, just returned from a five-week tour of Europe. "The people of Europe are in mortal fear of the Russians. We frightened them to death with our too-rapid demobilization."

The remnant of military forces still there, he said, "are maintaining a hope that we are not going to run out on them."

Chile Sends Troops To Struck Mine Areas

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 8 (AP).—The first contingent of army reservists reported today for duty in the Chilean coal zones, where 16,000 miners entered their fourth day of a strike the government charges is Communist-inspired.

There was no break in the strike front despite the government's action in assuming control of the mines and naming Brig. Gen. Danus Pena, military commander of the Lota and Coronel strike areas with authority to "select personnel" and get the mines operating.

U. N. Committee Approves Balkan 'Watchdog' Group

ditions inside Greece as well as on the border.

If the full Assembly approves today's decision, a committee would set headquarters at Salonika, and stay in existence "pending a new decision of the General Assembly," which means for at least a year.

It will have these duties:

1. "To observe" whether Greece and her three northern neighbors establish "good neighborly relations" among themselves, set up frontier conventions, settle frontier incidents peacefully and cooperate in settling refugee and minority problems;

2. To be "available" to help the four governments wherever possible;

3. To recommend a special session of the Assembly "as a matter of urgency" if it finds such a step necessary;

4. To carry out its functions "in such places and in the territories of the four states concerned as it may deem appropriate";

5. To report to the next regular Assembly, or to a special session, and make whatever recommendations it wishes; and

6. To set up whatever subcommittees it thinks necessary.

Greece's Neighbors Questioned

In addition, Secretary-General Trygve Lie would be called upon to make a standing arrangement with each of the four Balkan governments to give the commission "full freedom of movement and all necessary facilities for the performance of its functions."

In the past the three Communist Balkan states refused to cooperate with the Security Council's Commission of Inquiry, on grounds that it would violate their sovereignty.

Today all three of them were asked point-blank whether they would cooperate. Bulgaria and Albania replied that they needed time to consult their governments. For Yugoslavia, Bebler answered only that his country fully understood her obligations under the Charter.

These answers did not suggest that cooperation would be forthcoming. But the committee decided today, under the commanding leadership of Premier Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, that answers were essential.

Spaak Upbraids Russians

It was Spaak alone who convinced the committee to vote on the American resolution in parts, and to vote first on the creation of a special commissoin. Then, when Vishinsky protested, Spaak upbraided the Soviet group for their standards of debate, so that "if one does not agree with certain members, one is immediately called a liar, a slandered and one rapidly turns into a fascist and a warmonger, too." If these standards became general, he warned, "it would be best to close our doors immediately, since we would never get anywhere in any field."

"There are no victories to be won here, some over the others," Spaak reminded Vishinsky. "There is only one victory to be won here: The victory of cooperation in the solution of problems, putting an end to a difficult situation."

Although today's votes were highly satisfactory to the Americans, there is still no certainty of similar majorities when the committee comes to vote on the condemnation of the three Balkan countries. Many smaller countries still shy away from involvement in such a vote.

Ramadier to Call For Budget Balance

Paris, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Premier Paul Ramadier tomorrow will announce a drastic new financial program designed to "save the franc," balance the 1948 budget and head off total inflation in France.

In a grim radio broadcast to the French people, the elderly Socialist leader is expected to call for ruthless axing of governmental expenditures and a crackdown on "bilkers" or tax evaders. The program was approved at a cabinet meeting this morning and will be submitted to the National Assembly November 13.

U. N. Begins Newscasts In Hebrew Language

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 8 (U.P.).—The United Nations tonight began Hebrew language broadcasts to the Middle East, marking the first time U. N. has broadcast in a language not used by a U. N. member.

Tonight's newscast was a test, the regular broadcasts scheduled to go on every Thursday night starting tomorrow. They will include nine minutes of news of the week's U. N. developments, concentrating on debate over the Palestine problem. U. N. has been broadcasting in Arabic.

Nazi Admits Slaying Of Million in Russia

Nuernberg, Oct. 8 (AP).—Otto Ohlendorf, Nazi S. S. major general, admitted today that his "einsatz commandos" slew a million "racially inferior" people in Russia, but denied his own guilt and placed the blame on the Russians. Ohlendorf said the Jews slain were politically partisan and thus "dangerous," "Those we executed were singing the Internationale and hailing Stalin as they died," he added.

Dollar Aid Now or More Cuts In Imports, Cripps Warns U. S.

London, Oct. 8 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Britain's new economics minister, declared today that unless some form of dollar aid was forthcoming "this year," Britain would be forced to make further cuts in American imports that would start a "descending spiral of depression" in many countries, particularly in Europe.

Speaking at his first news conference since the cabinet shakeup that elevated him to command of the nation's economic revival campaign, Cripps said, however, that Britain could avoid further cuts in her standard of living by emergency financial steps if Marshall Plan aid for Europe is ready by next June.

He said Britain would like to draw quickly the last 400 million dollars of the $3,750,000,000 American loan, now frozen by the agreement of August 20 suspending the free exchange of pounds into dollars in trade with other countries.

The economics minister's reference to a start in Marshall Plan aid by next Jun came in reply to a question after he had listed emergency financial steps open to this country.

These include, he said, drawing on the remaining 400 million dollars of the loan, further sales from the sterling area's nearly £600,000,000 ($2,400,000,000) gold and other reserves, further exchanges of sterling for dollars through the International Monetary Fund and application for a loan from the International Bank.

He declared Britain's problem was closely linked with Europe, noting that the 16-nation report on the Marshall Plan written at Paris emphasized "that the whole problem of recovery depends upon a solution being found to the dollar problem."

He said the cuts in imports from dollar countries would likely extend to raw materials and "it is not necessary for me to stress the effect on our productive power that such cuts might have."

"We would thus enter a descending spiral of depression, the consequences of which would not be confined to Britain alone. The blow would fall with particular weight on Europe."

Italian Socialists' Red Tie Challenged

Red International Situation Spurs Demand on Nenni's Organization

London, Oct. 8 (AP).—Pietro Nenni's Italian Socialists were challenged today to slash their ties with the Communists, in a development which pointed up the situation faced by European Socialists as a result of the creation of the new Communist international organization.

British Labor Party informants said the whole issue may be brought to a head when the 21-nation international Socialist conference meets in Antwerp late next month or early in December.

The challenge to Nenni's party came from the moderate Italian Socialist Laborers' Party in Rome.

"The violent expressions of the comintern against European socialism places our fusionists (the Nenni party) at the crossroads," the laborers declared in their newspaper L'Humanita. "Their game has been unmasked, they must take a position."

The Communist manifesto called Prime Minister Attlee of Britain and former Premier Leon Blum of France "traitors" to the working classes.

A Labor informant here pointed out that some of the delegates to the international socialist conference have joined with the Communists in coalition governments in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania.

French Strife Feared

Paris, Oct. 8 (INS).—France's agricultural minister predicted today that the Communist Party will lose 20 per cent of its peasant supporters in municipal elections this month because of membership in the new world Communist organization.

The Socialist minister, Francois-Marie Tanguy-Prigent, also warned in an interview that if France is forced to cut bread rations again through failure to get American wheat, "there inevitably will be civil strife that may be impossible to control."

Truman Attacked by Reds

Rome, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Unita, official organ of the Communist Party, charged today that President Truman was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Unita headlined the charge in large type spread over three columns, but carried no documentation to support it. The article stated flatly that "eminent persons in the United States belong to the Ku Klux Klan and Harry Truman also."

Th earticle, sub-titled "stories which everyone knows in the United States," recalled the President's "membership in the Pendergast gang" and said the political machine dealt mainly in vice.

[In Atlanta, Grand Dragon Samuel Green of the Ku Klux Klan branded a Communist charge that President Truman is a klansman as a "silly Russian effort to make him look bad in the eyes of some people. "If President Truman had been a member, I certainly would have known about it," he said.]

Gazette Accuses Pope

Moscow, Oct. 8 (AP).—A writer in the Literary Gazette declared today that Pope Pius XII was preparing to label Communism "the heresy of the times" and accused the pontiff of "entirely and openly calling for war against the Soviet Union."

In a three-column article, Boris Kandidov declared the Pope had entered into an alliance with President Truman, and had undertaken "by every means to assist the aggressive policy of American monopolies."

[It was the Literary Gazette that recently compared President Truman with Adolf Hitler.]

Pope Admits Need of Force To Legislators

Castel Gondolfo, Italy, Oct. 8 (U.P.). Pope Pius told members of the United States House of Representatives Armed Services Committee today that only force could bring to terms some enemies of justice.

In an earlier audience with a group of American Legion pilgrims, he warned that the Bill of Rights might be lost in a "bloodless battle."

In an address yesterday to a joint congressional committee investigating the United States information program in Europe, the text of which was released today, the Pope compared the present situation with that of the Crusade in 1571. When "powers representing Christian civilization united to defeat the colossal threat from the east."

330-Ton Transformer Gets Stuck in Tunnel

Paris, Oct. 8.—Engineers in charge of hauling a 330-ton transformer by road to the site of the huge Genissiat Dam in the French Alps found themselves today in the embarrassing position of the man who built a boat in his basement and couldn't get it out the door.

Mounted on a gigantic 96-wheeled trailer, the transformer stuck 500 yards from the exit of a tunnel in the Mont du Chat, according to the French News Agency. Calculations had led engineers to believe there would be at least a 2-inch clearance all the way. Workers with acetylene torches began cutting away the sheet-metal lining of the tunnel, hoping that its removal would give the extra space needed.

2 Ex-GI Photographers Held For Theft of Atomic Secrets

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Oct. 8 (AP). Two former servicemen accused of stealing atom secrets from the Los Alamos atomic project were arrested in New Mexico today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Albuquerque field office of the FBI said the men, both former Army photographers at the installation, were Ernest Lawrence Paporello, 30, of Albuquerque, and George Wellington Thompson, 38, of Riverside, N. Mex., 85 miles north of here, and about 20 miles from Los Alamos.

They were accused in complaints filed at Santa Fe with taking property and records from the project which the FBI said consisted of photographs containing classified information. The complaints contained only general descriptions of the pictures, and gave no clews to the nature of the information.

In addition, Thompson was charged with taking two photos from the Army's Sandia base, super-secret weapons project at the east edge of Albuquerque.

Paporello, described as an itinerant photographer, was taken into custody at an Albuquerque studio where the Federal agents said he was employed prior to his arrest.

Thompson was arrested at his photographer's shop in Espanola near Riverside.

Arrested Simultaneously

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover announced the arrests in Washington barely an hour and a half after field agents took both men into custody simultaneously at 4 p. m. (EST).

Taken before U. S. Commissioner Albert Gonzales at Santa Fe, Thompson pleaded innocent to the Sandia charge, which accused him of taking the pictures on May 17, 1946, and pleaded guilty to removing classified 35-millimeter negatives, plus some unclassified photos, from Los Alamos on October 31, 1945.

In Albuquerque, Paporello asked that hearing be continued to next Monday to permit him to obtain counsel, and U. S. Commissioner Owen J. Mowrey set the hearing for 10 a. m. next Monday.

Paporello was accused in one court of taking six photographs containing classified information from Los Alamos on August 12, 1945, and, in a second, of concealing them.

Both men were ordered held under $10,000 bond.

The arrests bring to five the number of persons who have been taken into custody in connection with the removal of documents relating to the atom bomb and atomic experiments.

The FBI said Thompson was in charge of the photographic laboratory at Los Alamos until September 10, 1945, when he received an honorable discharge.

"Both men were attached to the photographic laboratory during the period the first atomic bomb was developed and subsequently detonated at Alamogordo, N. Mex.," the FBI said.

The FBI announcement stated: "In both cases the photographs and films which were removed when the men left on furlough or upon discharge have been recovered."

"Take my word for it, brother—that collar will fit as comfortably after it's washed as it does now! And you don't have to worry about buttons popping off your chest every time you inhale! They're anchored—but good! The wife tells me that Bond makes these shirts in their own factories—controls the workmanship from cutting room to counter. No wonder they look so handsome and wear so well! Bond controls the price too . . . We think 2.95 is something sensational in this day of dizzy prices! That's why we buy a dozen at a clip—really cut ourselves in on a good thing! And it IS a good thing—these shirts are unconditionally GUARANTEED for ONE FULL YEAR! Better look into it!"

Lovett Says Reds Bar Aid

Soviet Union, were included among these representatives. It has also taken careful note of the terms of the manifesto issued by this conference, which maligned the aims of the American and British people in the recent war and carried to new lengths the distortions of United States policy with which the Communist press everywhere has recently been replete.

"The documents issued by the Warsaw Conference speak for themselves. The parties and governments associated with this program have made clear their intention to prevent, if they can, the economic recovery of Europe.

"People in Europe who permit themselves to be misled by these malicious and unscrupulous distortions will be taking a heavy responsibility on themselves; for there could be no possibility of avoiding economic disaster if the concepts of the Warsaw Conference were to prevail.

Calls For Coolness

"For Americans this is a time for coolness and clarity of judgment. We must not allow ourselves to be deflected from the course we have chosen; and we must continue to study with sympathy but with calm realism the problem of how Europe can be assisted to regain its proper place in a stable and peaceful world."

At the White House during the day President Truman received the new Minister of Communist-dominated Hungary, one of the nine nations which took part in the Warsaw Conference. Mr. Truman assured Rustem Vambery, the Hungarian Minister, that the United States would "continue to support" the people of Hungary in their aspiration toward "fundamental freedoms."

The President recalled that Vambery had lived for many years in the United States and said he felt the diplomat's "familiarity with the American traditions of liberty and justice" would guide him in his work here.

Vambery replied that he had fought all his life "for human rights, democracy and justice" and said the "spirit of Louis Kossuth . . . is still as much alive" in Hungary as in the United States. He asked for patience and said Hungary needed the "spiritual support" which the United States could offer.

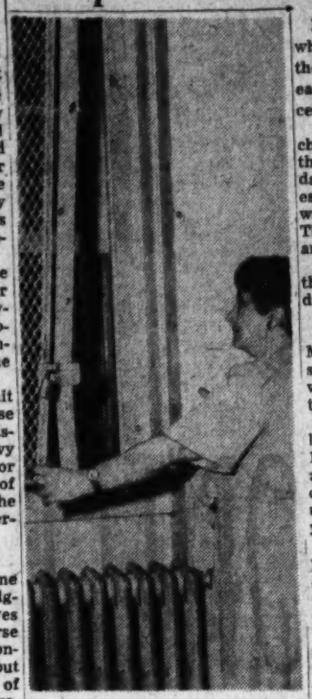
British Request Discussed

Discussions were begun at the State Department on Britain's request that the United States assume a larger share of the dollar cost of maintaining the British-American zones of Germany. At yesterday's meeting Britain's reasons for making the request were reviewed and four committees were appointed to examine technical and financial details.

Meanwhile, Lovett told his news conference, Government agencies here were continuing to scrape the bottom of the barrel for stopgap aid to Europe pending effectiveness of the Marshall Plan. It has been estimated that as much as 800 million might be needed for this purpose and Lovett indicated no substantial progress had been made toward finding these funds.

The imminence of France's need for help was made abundantly clear by Harvey Alphand, French director of economics, who told a news conference his country would run out of dollars within a week. He said that unless immediate help appears, France would be forced to halt purchases of American wheat, fats and coal by October 15.

4 Barefoot Women Prisoners Escape Cells—Very Briefly



The Washington Post

ESCAPE 'ROUTE'—Mrs. L. O. Ward, police matron at the Women's Bureau, examines window through which four escaped. They pulled steel screen loose from window jam

Four barefoot women prisoners who punched their way out of the flimsy police Women's Bureau early yesterday were back in their cells a few hours later.

The four, arrested on various charges and in different parts of the city between 9:30 p. m. Tuesday and 1:30 a. m. yesterday, escaped by pushing the steel grill work from a second-story window. They climbed down a fire escape and scattered about 4 a. m.

They were barefoot because their shoes had been taken to discourage escape.

Police listed them as:

Myrtle Jean Combs, 27, of 1342 Monroe st. nw., arrested for assault with a rocking chair. She was rearrested at her home a short time later by Pvt. William Nevin.

Helen Logsdon, 23, who was listed with two addresses, 4415 14th st. nw., and 419 7th st. se., arrested early yesterday on a disorderly charge. She gave herself up at the bureau about 2 p. m. yesterday.

Hazel Blades, 25, of 1435 Harvard st. nw., arrested for drunk and disorderly conduct. She was given a $20 fine or 20 days in jail on the charge yesterday afternoon.

Caroline Johnson, 23, of 63 S st. nw., also arrested on drunk and disorderly charges. She was given $15 or 15 days.

Plane Still Sought

Pearl Harbor, Oct. 8 (AP).—Army and Navy planes today resumed their search for three American seamen missing 15 days on four powerless minesweepers. One is radio operator William B. Hoskins, Washington, D. C.

"Dean" of Burglars, 92, Jailed Despite Plea

London, Oct. 8 (AP).—James Ferguson, 92-year-old "dean of the house-breaking profession," began a four-month prison sentence today despite a quavering plea that he was "ready to settle down."

Ferguson has been a problem for the past 47 years during which he has served sentences for burglary totalling 45½ years. The prosecution said Ferguson, despite his age, still was agile enough to climb through windows.

British-Russian Trade Agreement Urged by Strachey

Liverpool, England, Oct. 8 (AP).—Food Minister John Strachey proposed today that Britain and Russia "agree to differ" temporarily in the political field and get on with the work of drafting a trade agreement.

Watching the arrival of the first consignment of Russian food for Britain since before the war, Strachey told reporters one of the basic economic realties is that Britain and Russia are mutually complementary, rather than competitive, in the economic field.

"Russia has food and timber to sell," he said. ". . . We have manufactured goods of all kinds to sell."

The small food consignment which arrived today was outside the scope of a full-scale trade pact.

Each government has expressed a "desire" to resume the talks, but Britain wants Russia first to pay up the unpaid balance of a debt installment due last August 1. Only half was paid.

Airgun 'Shot' Method Shown

penetration. Its dosage can be controlled to a medical fineness, said the Georgetown University professor.

The hypospray gun, one of only three ever manufactured, was released to Dr. Tuohy by Dr. Robert Hingson, professor of anesthesiology at the University of Tennessee Medical School, who is one of the pioneers in caudal anesthesia.

Dr. Hingson, a former student of Dr. Tuohy's in 1938-39, saw the medical possibilities of the air-blast injection idea when it was first presented to him by its unidentified originator.

Idea Boon of War

Dr. Tuohy explained that the idea for the air-gun injection grew out of a wartime blast accident. A worker who apparently escaped uninjured in the blast of a petroleum plant came to a hospital several months later.

He complained of stiffness of the hand, said Dr. Tuohy. Physicians opened up the hand and found countless particles of tar inside. But the patient told them his hand had shown no sign of injury.

The originator of the hypospray heard of the incident, and physicians told them of similar cases where bomb blasts had blown particles of steel into persons without apparently breaking the skin. He worked out the idea of the hypospray and presented it to manufacturers.

Identity of the originator and the names of the developing engineers and manufacturing plant are being kept secret for the present, said Dr. Tuohy.

"Why, with this gun someone could readily substitute poison for insulin, 'shoot' his victim by pressing the hypospray gun against him in a crowd, and walk off. The victim wouldn't know he'd been hit, but within a minute and a half he'd collapse, fatally injected," said Dr. Tuohy.

Looks Like Flashlight

The hypospray, which resembles a two-cell flashlight, is a cylinder of stainless steel containing a special air gun. At one end is a screw-type compressor with which the operator can build up to 125 pounds per square inch air pressure simply by turning that end clockwise.

At the other end is a clamp to receive metapules, or cartridges of the medicine to be injected. The metapules are sterilely sealed and are opened for insertion by removing the container's cap with a built-in opener on the side of the cylinder, much like a miniature beer bottle opener.

The gun ready, it is "shot" by pressing a push button at the base of the cylinder. Compressed air forces the medicine through the patient's skin as it shoots out through the invisible hole in the end of the metapule.

The hole, the metapule muzzle so to speak, is three one-thousandths of an inch in diameter, the thickness of a normal human hair.

"At 125 pounds pressure," said Dr. Tuohy, "the insulin or other medicine penetrates the body to 1½ inches. There is no known danger of its use."

Two Volunteer for Test

He demonstrated that use yesterday before the physicians, shooting metapules of novacaine into two volunteer internes from Georgetown University Hospital. He also "shot" it through paper and, though it showed visible spray for some 18 inches on the other side of the paper, there were no visible marks of peneration on the paper.

Sixty per cent of patients who have been given injections with the hypospray said they felt no sensation whatsoever, said Dr. Tuohy. The other 40 per cent said they felt a dull thud but no pain, he added.

"In most instances it leaves no marks. But on some blondes and redheads there will be a slight redness, and occasionally some oozing," Dr. Tuohy told the physicians.

Because the medicinal cartridge are "sterisealed," he said, diabetics can take the hypospray on camping trips or wherever they care to go and can "shoot" themselves at the prescribed times without any more preparation than the simple operation of the "gun."

He said the hyposprays were in production stage and should be in manufacture in large quantities by January or February.

Cites Need for Control

"But there will have to be some control of licensing on them if they are to be used for good rather than evil," he told reporters.

"It wouldn't do much good to regulate the sale of the 'guns' because once they get into the public's hand it wouldn't take long for someone to duplicate them.

"They'll probably have to control the distribution of the metapules of deadly or habit-forming drugs. Just like the sale and distribution of narcotics is controlled federally today."

"But once this thing does hit the market, the hypodermic needle and syringe are out," he declared.

At present, the hyposprays can accommodate metapules containing one half of a cubic centimeter of medicine. But change of size will be a simple matter for the manufacturers, Dr. Tuohy said.

Court Clerk Gets 5 Years in Theft

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 8.—Leroy J. Freeman, 46, has been sentenced to serve five years in prison for embezzling $2042 while clerk of civil and police justice courts here.

Miss Hoey Is Named to Head Social Agencies

Griffith Miss Hoey

Election of Miss Jane Hoey as acting president of the Council of Social Agencies was announced yesterday following resignation of Dr. Ernest S. Griffith as president.

Miss Hoey is first vice president of the council's board of directors and also is director of the bureau of public assistance in the Federal Security Agency's social security administration.

Dr. Griffith, who resigned due to pressure of work, is director of the legislative reference section of the Library of Congress. He has been president of the council since June of 1944. His resignation was accepted by the board "with deep regret and sincere appreciation."

He had completed the three terms to which Council by-laws limited its presidents, but the ruling was waived last June until a successor could be selected.

Miss Hoey will serve as president while the Council and Community Chest formulate plans for a proposed merger.

After education at Trinity College, the New York School of Social Work and Columbia University, Miss Hoey came to Washington in 1936. She helped in formulating the Federal program of grants-in-aid to States for public assistance for the aged, needy blind and dependent children.

Dr. Griffith, a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University and former dean of graduate studies at American University, will continue to serve as a member of the Council board.

Nubbins Wins Another Fight In 1000-1 Chance Operation

Denver, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Forrest (Nubbins) Hoffman, stout-hearted lad of 6, survived a kidney operation against 1000-to-1 odds today and doctors said he may be "okay" without further surgery.

The little boy, who had an "early Christmas" three years ago because his parents feared he would not live to see Santa Claus, came through in good shape.

Nubbins won the Nation's heart with his bravery in his first operation for life three years ago. He was every bit as brave today. His cheerfulness made nurses cry and doctors swallow hard.

The surgeon who performed the operation asked that his name be withheld. He was pleased with the results.

"It was just perfect," he said. "If I'd do it again, I wouldn't change a thing."

Cancer Unit Has '48 Fund Of $107,000

The District Division of the American Cancer Society has a balance of $107,000 for use in combating the disease here next year.

Members of the division learned yesterday, at their firfist annual meeting, that the money will be used in the following way:

About $40,000 for service, including four cancer and prevention detection clinics, purchase of radon and X-ray therapy and diagnostic and treatment.

Education, including salary for a director of education, will take $10,900. About $13,700 will be needed for administration and an equal sum will be set aside for reserve for administration.

$15,000 For 1948 Drive

The division plans to spend $15,000 on its 1948 campaign and to keep $13,000 in a general reserve fund.

Dr. Harry H. Kerr was reelected president of the division and chairman of the board of trustees at the meeting, held at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Board officers elected to serve with him are Eliot Wadsworth, vice chairman; Dr. Calvin T. Klopp, secretary, and Frederick P. H. Siddons, treasurer.

Division members heard Robert W. Hudgens, director of field operations for the American Cancer Society, describe the need for a working cancer control program in every county in the Nation.

"There is a vast need for more volunteers and for better training of volunteers," he declared. "The national society is working toward this end."

Survey Results Presented

Dr. Jay McLean, director of cancer control, District Health Department, presented the results of a recent cancer survey in the District, made public last Sunday.

Again stressing the need for a block-by-block educational campaign to induce patients to seek early cancer cures, he said:

"I believe that only one-third of the cases are reporting in time for successful treatment. The first line of defense against cancer is popular knowledge of the early signs of cancer. No time should be lost between early observation of cancer and competent treatment."

In addition to the officers of the board, the following were elected board members:

Dr. Murray M. Copeland, who will serve with the officers on the executive committee, Mrs. Elizabeth Carrere Barbour, Carter T. Barron, Edward P. Bartelt, Charles C. Boysen, Rufus G. Byars, Morris Cafritz, Msgr. John K. Cartwright, Dr. Roger M. Cholmer, Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Dr. Charles B. Drew, Charles B. Duncan, Harry Eaton, Mrs. Herbert B. Elliston.

Mrs. J. Clifford Folger, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Dr. Luke E. Gilje, Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Melville B. Grosvenor, George E. Hamilton, jr., Dr. William P. Herbat, J. Henry Hoskinson, Howard W. Kacy, Henry J. Kaufman, Samuel H. Kauffman.

The project was financed on a 50-50 basis by the District and the Public Roads Administration.

Work began yesterday on a $154,000 four-lane concrete highway on Sheriff rd. ne., between Minnesota ave. and the District line. It will replace a narrow, winding, two-lane macadam road in a thickly populated area.

ITU Head Refutes Publishers' Charges

Randolph Says Action on Taft-Hartley Labor Act Exceeded Their Authority

San Francisco, Oct. 8 (AP).—Woodruff Randolph, president of the AFL International Typographical Union, said today the American Newspaper Publishers Association overstepped its authority when it filed charges of Taft-Hartley Act violations against his union.

Cranston Williams, the ANPA's general manager, yesterday filed the charges in Cincinnati before the National Labor Relations Board accusing the union of eight instances of violations.

Randolph, attending the AFL convention here, commented:

"The American Newspaper Publishers Association does not employ any of our members anywhere in the country, and it is not an interested party.

"The ANPA has no more authority to sign contracts covering wages, hours and working conditions on behalf of its alleged 400 publisher members than the ITU has to sign contracts on behalf of its local unions whose members are employed by such publishers.

"Mr. Williams knows this as well as I know it. To prove it to the people of the country, I here and now offer to sign a contract covering such unions and publishers if Mr. Williams will sign it—if we can agree upon the terms thereof . . .

"The ITU is continuing its long established friendly relations with responsible publishers."

The filing of ANPA charges followed the union's refusal to sign new contracts upon the expiration of current ones. Cranston charged the ITU was refusing to bargain collectively, maintaining the closed shop and other Taft-Hartley Act violations.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—Senator Joseph Ball (R., Minn.) questions Chairman Paul Herzog (left) of the National Labor Relations Board about the board's decision that top officials of the CIO and AFL need not sign non-Communist pledges. Ball, chairman of the joint Senate-House "watchdog" committee to keep check on operations of the new Taft-Hartley labor law, and Herzog agreed yesterday that the unions likewise will not have to file financial statements under the act

Union Tells Wives to War On Long Skirt

By the United Press

The CIO advised its members and their families yesterday "to absolutely refuse" to fall for the new styles in women's clothes. Stick to dresses now in the closet, it said.

"The new change—from short to long skirts, from padded shoulders to narrow 'feminine' shoulders—is not being launched for the sake of beauty," the labor organization said in its monthly bulletin, Economic Outlook. "The cause is purely economic."

"Workers' wives cannot afford to throw out the excellent garments now hanging in their closets. It is up to them to absolutely refuse to buy the new styles."

Overload Stops N. Y. Parcel Post In Express Tieup

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The Railway Express Agency drivers strike which threatens to develop into a general freight blockade is piling up merchandise to shipment to stores in all parts of the country.

Resident buying offices for retail stores said today that until now shipments have been moving through "pretty well," but that "a chaotic condition" will result if the situation is not cleared up this week.

Goods normally sent by express have been moving out of New York by parcel post, air express, air freight and truck.

"Buyers are even getting themselves trunks, filling them with merchandise and checking them through on their railroad tickets," one buying office said.

Today Postmaster Albert Goldman announced that postoffice terminals here would stop receiving all parcel post packages as of 6 p. m. (EST) today because of the overload.

American Airlines reported that during the period of the strike its air shipments have increased 400 to 500 per cent.

Lawmakers Divided on NLRB Ruling

By The Associated Press

Congressional opinion differed emphatically yesterday over an official ruling that top AFL and CIO officers need not sign non-Communist affidavits.

But one of the authors of the Taft-Hartley Act, Senator Taft (R., Ohio), approved heartily. He said at Des Moines that "it was not logical to require" that AFL and CIO board members swear they are not Communists. He said they have no control over the individual unions under them.

The ruling, an interpretation of the Taft-Hartley Law handed down yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board, failed to win "unanimous approval" of a joint Senate-House committee set up to study how the law operates.

Surrender To Lewis

One committee member, Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.), told reporters the decision "is a complete surrender to John L. Lewis." He contended that Congress must begin rewriting the act if the board continues to make such interpretations.

Senator Ellender (D., La.), said earlier that he feels the AFL and CIO leaders should take the oaths too.

Lewis, an AFL vice president, had refused to sign such an affidavit. Under an opinion of Robert L. Denham, NLRB general counsel, this would have prevented all AFL-affiliated unions from using the board's facilities. But yesterday's 4-to-1 ruling by the board said Denham was wrong.

The board held that sections of the law requiring union officers to sign the affidavits and to make periodic financial reports to the Government and to union members do not apply to top leaders of AFL and CIO. They do apply, however, to officers of unions affiliated with these organizations.

Means They Needn't File

Senator Ball (R., Minn.), joint committee chairman, agreed with board Chairman Paul Herzog today the decision means the CIO and AFL need not file financial statements.

After a two-hour closed session of the board members and the committee, Ball informed newsmen the discussion had turned to a definition of who actually are union officers. Ball said Denham defined them as those designated as union officers by constitutions of their unions, and the Senator said this "appears logical."

Repreesntative Landis (R., Ind.), a committee member, suggested Congress amend the act to require shop stewards, business agents and union attorneys to take the non-communism oath.

CIO to Draft Policy On Taft-Hartley Act

Boston, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Eleven top CIO officials, headed by union president Philip Murray, will devote the next two days to preparing a policy for dealing with the controversial Taft-Hartley law, it was announced today.

After a session of the 32-man CIO executive board, Murray said the special policy committee, which includes nine CIO vice presidents and the union's secretary-treasurer, might have its recommendations ready for presentation to the board Friday.

Murray said the executive board was considering reports that FBI agents have been investigating union activities in connection with recent federal elections in Baltimore and in Bucks and Lehigh counties in Pennsylvania.

The board said the right of unions to support or oppose a candidate in a political election constituted a "base issue" and that if such activities "constitute violations of the Taft-Hartley law, that issue should be met publicly and openly in the American way."

Serb Peasant Party Chief Gets 9 Years

Belgrade, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Dragoljub Javanavich, leader of the opposition Serbian National Peasant Party, was sentenced to nine years' imprisonment today for allegedly working with foreign agents against the Tito regime in Yugoslavia.

Franjo Gazhi, Jovanovich's associate, was sentenced to five years on the same charge. The verdicts were announced today after the conclusion of their trial, which opened October 1 and ended yesterday.

Too Much Bread

Two wasteful practices in the sale of bread seem to us logical focal points for local effort in the food-saving campaign. One is the custom of making bread in a size too large to be used by a small family before it becomes stale. The other is the consignment system used by some bakeries whereby retail outlets customarily are loaded down with more bread than they can possibly sell, especially over weekends.

The average loaf of bread sold in the District weighs 1 pound, though sale of half-pound as well as larger loaves is permitted by law. We think that District officials, particularly the corporation counsel's office, ought to encourage the production of smaller loaves and, if need be, waive application of the law to permit sale of intermediate sizes, with proper price adjustment, during the food emergency. To be sure, some bakers would experience difficulties with bread molds and wrapping machines. But part of the obstacle could be overcome by not filling molds completely. Moreover, odd-sized loaves already are manufactured by some local bakeries. A 12-ounce loaf is produced for sale in Maryland; there is no reason why it should not be sold here. Another idea developed elsewhere that we think has merit is to wrap the two halves of a loaf separately so that the second portion stays fresh until it is needed.

Probably not all bread returns can be eliminated even with scrupulous attention given to meeting demand exactly. But certainly the practice of overstocking bread counters on the theory that the public will buy more from the highest pile is a wasteful procedure that bakers ought to eliminate by cooperation. The sale of returned loaves as hog feed is just as objectionable as the necessity of throwing stale bread in the garbage.

Non-Communist Rule

It is for no love of the Communists who blight American labor unions that the National Labor Relations Board has exempted top-level AFL and CIO officials from the non-Communist affidavits required by the Taft-Hartley law. The issue before the board was the workability of the ruling by General Counsel Robert N. Denham to the effect that no local unions were eligible for privileges under the labor law unless all officials of the AFL and CIO also signed the pledge. While the reversal of Mr. Denham's interpretation was not unexpected, the NLRB decision is an indication of the reasonable attitude that must prevail if the Taft-Hartley law is not to result in a hopeless jumble.

The salient part of the NLRB action is contained in the opinion of the majority: "We must assume that Congress intended to effectuate the policies of the (Taft-Hartley) Act by the most practical means available." The policy in this case is to eliminate Communist influence from unions, especially from union leadership. Certainly this purpose would not be served by tying the hands of a local union whose officials had signed the affidavit, merely because for one reason or another national officers of the CIO or AFL had not. Precisely the opposite would be the result in that the Communists who never bothered with the affidavit would have a sounding board. Indeed, that was already beginning to happen as cases piled up. Since language of the Taft-Hartley Act is not specific on this point, we think the board was well advised to take the broad interpretation. In other words, it construes the law to require affidavits from officials of local, national and international unions that are actually concerned in matters before the board, but not from top-level parent body heads who are remote from the bargaining process.

We have not changed our opinion that the non-Communist affidavit is an ineffectual means of breaking the Communist hold on unions. Support for our contention is to be found in the stratagem reportedly planned by several Communist-dominated CIO unions. The Communist and Communist-line officers who cannot sign the affidavit are to step down from their elected posts to take nonelective paid jobs with the unions. This is a ruse which will fool nobody, but it will maintain the Communist grip while permitting ostensible compliance with the law.

Be that as it may, the affidavit is part of the law as enacted by Congress. Therefore the important thing is to apply this provision in a way to cause the least disruption in normal labor relations. To this end the NLRB's sensible decision, coupled with Mr. Denham's prompt acceptance, are encouraging signs.

War On Inflation

It was remiss of the President not to couple a specific anti-inflation program with the program of food conservation. Exports are not the prime cause of high prices, but they are a contributing cause, and the people know it. Nothing is more likely, against the background of present prices, to breed xenophobia, let alone isolationism, than this knowledge. Clearly, then, the current conservation program and the Marshall Plan are handicapped by the lack of attention to the problem of inflation. On this front all that the President has done is to call upon the grain exchanges to put up existing margins on speculation. The exchanges have responded, but only to the extent of lifting them to 33 1/3 per cent, an increase which we feel is not nearly high enough. After all, a speculator in the stock market has to put up 75 per cent of the cost of his securities. Why shouldn't this apply as well to the grain exchanges? For our part we would go further. In view of what hangs upon the aid program, in view of the perils of inflation—speculation should be driven off the exchanges for the duration of the emergency.

But this is only one aspect of the fight on inflation on which we are pussyfooting. Senator Saltonstall calls attention to the 200 million dozens of eggs that the Agriculture Department has accumulated under the price-support system. His figures, apparently, are awry. The equivalent in whole eggs of the stocks of dried and frozen eggs in Government warehouses is, in fact, 134 million dozens. Most of them were bought at around 30 cents a dozen, or 90 per cent (support price) of parity. Senator Saltonstall asks why not release them to the market—at least those stocks that are not already earmarked to be sent abroad? We find the inquiry, with eggs at 80 cents a dozen at our store, very pertinent. What is true of eggs must be true of other commodities bought under the price-support policy.

An increase in the availability of goods is one of the sure ways of arresting the inflation. More output is, of course, the obvious method, but other means on the goods front are practicable, though some must await the assent of Congress. In the administration of our foreign trade President Truman can help to bring down domestic prices by a rigorous control of our exports. There can be, and is, waste in our exports as well as in our households. The waste lies in letting our exports of essentials go where they are least needed. On the import side, too, anti-inflation action is possible. If we took off the duties on scarce goods, then the price that the domestic consumer pays would likewise be hammered down. Finally, the method of reducing the price of butter is to take off the punitive tax on margarine.

Inflation is a phenomenon of too much money as well as too few goods. The Administration, in the matter of money, should show much more leadership than has hitherto been manifest. Take, for example, the prospective addition to credit money outstanding, when controls on consumer installment buying expire November 1. Though the Administration admonished Congress against repeal, it failed to be vigorous enough. It should reassert its opposition as soon as Congress is reassembled—which cannot be too soon.

Inflation is too much of a curse to allow it as much rope as we are doing, and in the circumstances of our domestic and foreign situation this indulgence has become a crime. To be sure, there must be sacrifice in fulfilling our world responsibilities, but it is the height of folly and an invitation to reaction to allow the people to make sacrifice for the sake of sacrifice. The American people are apt to tune their cooperation not only to demonstrated need but also to statesmanship.

Security Risk

The security standards announced by the Department of State reveal an interesting circularity of thought. Who can doubt that the department is right in regarding as a "security risk" any person who "engages in, supports or advocates treason" or who is "engaged in espionage" or who has "knowingly divulged classified information without authority." The term "security risk" is a miracle of understatement. Such persons are criminals, subject to prosecution in courts of law where, if convicted, they may be punished by death.

On the other hand, "habitual drunkenness, sexual perversion, moral turpitude, financial irresponsibility or criminal record" have little to do with security. Persons of such character should never have been hired by the department in the first place and obviously should be fired as speedily as possible. But it is quite unnecessary to invoke security in respect of offenses which themselves warrant dismissal. This is to make of the McCarran rider which gave the State Department its power of summary dismissal a booby trap liable to blow anyone out of any job at any time—and leave him permanently crippled. No such high explosives are necessary to deal with plain unfitness for public service.

It seems equally indisputable that the department is warranted in dismissing any person who advocates "subversion or sedition" or who has "habitual or close association" with members of subversive organizations. But these terms set no standards at all, for they are themselves so pudgy, imprecise and emotion-laden as to beg the very question they presume to answer. What is subversion? No statute defines it. What organizations are subversive and what constitutes habitual and close association with them? Apparently the department takes a most elastic view. It proposes to take into account as a factor in determining whether a person is a security risk not only participation in subversive organizations but also participation in "fronts" or even "contribution of funds thereto, attendance at meetings . . . or political, economic or social views." The last should suffice to cover everybody from the Secretary down. What views are proscribed and prohibited the department's set of principles does not disclose.

The vagueness of these standards is made the more dangerous by the inadequacy of the review procedure promised by the State Department's personnel security board. A man dismissed as a security risk is to be granted a hearing. But he will be afforded no clear specification of charges and he will have no opportunity to examine the evidence or cross-question the witnesses against him. Refutation is almost impossible under such conditions. That is why the Bill of Rights stipulates so clearly that "in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right . . . to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him." Dismissal from the State Department is not, to be sure, a criminal prosecution; but when it occurs on security grounds it carries penalties so severe as to demand protection against miscarriage of justice.

Last June, the State Department summarily dismissed 10 employes as security risks. Now it has changed its mind about three of them. These three will not regain their jobs but will be permitted to resign without prejudice. This seems to us fair enough; no administrator can reasonably be required to keep in his employ men in whom he lacks full confidence. But no administrator, we think, ought to attach to any employe the stigma of disloyalty, or of dismissal on security grounds, unless he possesses the kind of evidence which can withstand direct scrutiny, or witnesses willing and able to meet the challenge of cross-examination.

The State Department is justified, of course, in regarding itself as "a vital target for persons engaged in espionage" and in placing great emphasis upon national security. It needs to remember, however, that it is a target in particular for those nations which subordinate the individual to the state, that it is the mouthpiece of a nation which has always cherished the rights of the individual. It would be ironic and disastrous indeed if, in safeguarding national security, we sacrificed the values and freedoms which we deem it the function of the Nation to serve.

Attlee's House Cleaning

The most significant of the changes that Premier Attlee has made in his administration is his transfer of Emmanuel Shinwell from the Ministry of Fuel to the Ministry of War. This is a demotion, for the new post does not carry a seat in the cabinet, being a subordinate department of the Defense Ministry. It must have taken unusual toughness for Mr. Attlee to dispense with Mr. Shinwell. The Premier is a man of sensibility, with more than the usual qualms over the disagreeable job of firing friends and colleagues. Besides, Mr. Shinwell is chairman of the Labor Party and one of the leaders of the trade-union movement. Since the Labor government is more or less the organ of the Trades Union Congress, Mr. Attlee has to manipulate his offices, and there must have been a powerful pull to keep Mr. Shinwell in the cabinet.

That the Premier has at last got rid of Mr. Shinwell is a good blow in behalf of recovery. A business would be assured of bankruptcy if it had Mr. Shinwell as its managing director. He held the key position in recovery, yet he seems to have basked in the miners' comfortable conclusion that once the mines were nationalized a kind of millennium would be achieved automatically. The Yorkshire miners still cannot understand why the only noticeable change brought about by the "revolution" is that the boss is not next door but in London. Mr. Shinwell, moreover, was a most improvident administrator. Before last winter arrived, he was warned time after time that if there were not more mining, stockpiling and allocation, a crisis would occur before winter was over. He once said, in words that time made fit for the eating, "Everybody knows that there will be a fuel crisis except the Minister of Fuel." Nemesis arrived on the heels of the storms that blocked transport, and with little coal stocked, all industry in Britain was virtually paralyzed. But it was Britain that suffered, not Mr. Shinwell, and he rode out of the political tempest that developed with the industrial paralysis—at least until now.

In political position Mr. Shinwell belongs to the Left—that is to say, the extreme Socialists. He is demagogic as well as doctrinaire, with a flair for invective, which he lavished on all and sundry when his own shortcomings were exposed last winter. Cabinet meetings in London may be quieter affairs now that he has been dropped. The gain for recovery is also a gain for the moderates who want bread in our time more than socialism.

Broadcasts To Russia

I have read with considerable interest the letter from Fedor S. Mansetov, chairman, Russian Conversation Club of Washington, which you published on September 24. Mr. Mansetov's comments concerning the importance of the Voice of America broadcasts are complimentary and, therefore, satisfying, but his comments concerning the hours of broadcast and poor reception in some localities prompt me to offer some explanations.

While I thoroughly agree that citizens of the United States should have a fuller understanding of these broadcasts, I must point out that our programs in Russian to Russia are designed to be heard by the audience in Russia. Therefore, the hours of broadcasts are based on prime listening time in that country. The programs are heard in Russia at 9 p. m., and at midnight, Russian time. That is why they originate in New York during the working day.

Furthermore, poor reception, especially in the New York area, is to be expected. The transmitters carrying these programs are located up and down the Eastern seaboard and operate with directional antennas, beamed to Europe for rebroadcast over our Munich relays. Originating in this country, signals are therefore directed toward ionosphere, from which the signals are reflected downward to the European areas. Consequently, it is unlikely that good reception for these programs would be encountered in this country, and, particularly, in the New York area.

Surplus Food

Recently our Government, still trying to hold prices high, for reasons which are themselves debatable, has purchased 7,746,011 100-pound sacks of white potatoes, or 774,601,100 pounds of potatoes. Since we are approximately 140 million people, that means more than 5 pounds of potatoes for every man, woman and child in the United States.

During the war, we dehydrated potatoes and shipped them all over the world. What is to hinder our doing so now? Ships? So our shipping is tied up with strikes and we haven't enough ships? Very well, let the other countries come over with their ships and their seamen and get the potatoes.

Nor do we mean potatoes alone. The Government has bought 23,875,072 bushels of sweet potatoes, 558,036 gallons of concentrated orange juice, 67,850 bushels of snap beans, 59,450 tons of dried fruit, 26,450 tons of dried prunes and other things in large quantities, including 209 million pounds of dried skim milk. What of all those starving babies and children to whom milk is not available?

My 5 pounds of potatoes would give a substantial meal to a good-sized family. One hundred and forty million such meals would be a God-send to 140 million foreign families.

My share of those prunes, dried fruits, green beans and milk would help many little children lose that look of starvation and suffering. I for one am thoroughly indignant that my food and yours should be thrown away or burned when my brothers and my brothers' children starve. I demand my right to give my small share.

Wallace's Appeasement

While the Russian representatives in the United Nations are accusing the United States of warmongering and the Russian newspapers accuse Truman of being a second Hitler, Mr. Wallace is busy making speeches backing up their charges by insisting that Truman's policy is a war policy and that the only true peace policy is his own.

His policy, as far as one can judge from his speeches, is not to oppose Russia but to give her what she wants. What she wants is domination of western Europe through her controlled Communist Parties acting as "fifth columns" there, as she has already established domination over eastern Europe.

Mr. Wallace's policy is really just the old discredited policy of appeasement of the demands of a totalitarian dictatorship. We know from the experience of the democratic countries trying to get peace by appeasing Hitler that appeasement is the sure path to war.

Wallace's policy of appeasing Russia is a war policy, not a peace policy. That the Truman policy is truly a peace policy is proved by our official proposal to turn over control of atomic energy and atomic weapons to the whole world as soon as an international agency clothed with adequate powers of inspection, control and enforcement is set up. Russia opposes such an international authority, apparently because she does not want genuine inspection, control and enforcement powers in any international agency not subject to her veto.

"None So Blind"

Your editorial of October 5 on Congressmen Taber and Dondero reminds us of their pre-Pearl Harbor blindness. Both are listed in a book well known at that time (The Illustrious Dunderheads), published by Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

Mr. Taber (a New York lawyer throughout the World War I) has been elected to Congress by "sound" Republicans, in and since the year of the great Roosevelt landslide (eight two-year terms).

According to the voting record in the cited book, Mr. Taber was among the blind who voted against: (1) preparedness at Guam Naval Base; (2) selling arms to invaded nations fighing for survival; (3) revision, even as late as November, 1939, of the misnamed "Neutrality Act" which was clearly benefiting German aggression; (4) increasing our tiny production of planes (vote of June 22, 1939—two months before Poland fell); (5) the first lend-lease bill (nearly eight months after the fall of France and only 10 months before Pearl Harbor).

According to the cited book, the pre-Pearl-Harbor blindness of Mr. Dondero is even worse. He voted against each of the 11 major preparedness bills (including the five above listed).

Mr. Taber did appear to begin seeing something shortly before Pearl Harbor, but Mr. Dondero remained blind to the bitter end.

"Recreation Policy"

I have just read the letter published in The Washington Post from James E. Schwab, vice chairman D. C. Recreation Board, and your editorial on "Recreation Policy."

Apparently the editorial is intended as an answer to the letter from the board's officer. Yet it is no answer because it evades the real issue. Mr. Schwab's letter brings out very clearly that the Recreation Board does not make the policy of segregation for District playgrounds; it simply carries out the policy long established in this area and put into effect by a rule of the Board of Education.

In a previous editorial, The Washington Post spoke piously of American institutions. Is there any American institution more important than the rule of the majority? If a majority of the people living in the District of Columbia believe that segregation in schools and playgrounds (that is, equal opportunities for the races, but separate facilities) effects happier racial relations, that majority has the right to adopt such a system.

Why not give to the people of Washington a chance to express their will in this matter? Let all the people have a voice in it; not merely a group of reformers.

M. B. WILSON
Washington.

I commend heartily your editorial reply to Mr. James E. Schwab's letter published October 5. May I give some idea of the almost criminal negligence with regard to colored children and many white children by the arbitrary policy of the Board of Recreation.

Dunbar High School is situated across N st. from the New York ave. playground. Terrell Junior High School is across New York ave. The playground is barred to any but white children. By actual observation day after day there often is not a single white child on the ground until after 3 p. m. At Dunbar High School over 1000 girls are confined to a 60 by 40 gymnasium for periods of physical education, approximately 200 children to a class, with six physical education teachers. At Terrell Junior High School over 1000 boys and girls must play in the dangerous streets at recess and for outdoor exercises because they have no playground. Brook's Stadium, which adjoins Dunbar, is available to the 3000 students of Armstrong and Dunbar only part time, since it is the only stadium for the five colored high schools and is being prepared for the football games two and three days a week.

What is so sacred or hallowed about the New York Avenue Playground that it cannot be used during the school hours and at recess by these girls at Dunbar and boys and girls at Terrell? This is most senseless.

Gage School, Wilson Teachers College and Abbott students return to homes all over the city after school dismisses. The Recreation Department does not put a caretaker or supervisor on these grounds. Yet hundreds of colored and some white children go over the fence, cut holes and enter—since gates are supposed to be locked—and play without supervision.

Population shifts have added more colored residents to the vicinity of many white schools and playgrounds. Among them are Rosedale, Park View and Happy Hollow Playgrounds. The colored children must play in the streets or alleys while a few white children occupy all the swings, seesaws and play courts.

Granted that perhaps an old law prohibits schools being used for public instruction democratically, it is only a far-fetched interpretation of the law setting up the recreation system by which the recreation board justifies its policy. Many of the playgrounds are on land purchased from Federal funds. The School Board does not demand that the recreation board follow the school segregation law.

Most nonsensical and abhorrent to peoples all over is the Recreation Board's edict that white people may neither participate, speak in, or render concerts in Negro schools and vice-versa. As The Washington Post indicated, if the schools cannot operate so as to train the next generations not to hate or despise each other, under a liberal democratic Recreation Board's administration the playgrounds of our city might permit children to learn to recognize the individual worth and dignity of each other through play.

American Dream World

Return Of The Natives

MANY PERSONS long abroad have been rediscovering America these last few months by bus, train, motor car. Their new perspective on their native land and its people offers some clews as to how Americans will meet the call for food-sharing and respond to other eventful tests they are now facing.

I talked to three such returned natives, whose absences from their home country ranged from five months to 13 years.

Mrs. A., who lived in Scotland for five years prior to the war and who had spent recent years in war relief work in Europe, had just returned from a coast-to-coast tour of the United States by bus. She had wanted to get in touch with the "backbone" of her country, she said.

What had most impressed her about her countrymen? She hesitated, then exclaimed, "We are the most food-conscious people in the world!"

Every bus stop, she found, meant a rush of passengers for food, usually pie or sandwiches with coffee. Many adults, most children, were addicts between meals of ice cream cones, candy bars, soft drinks, cookies. At her stops to visit relatives and friends, food, particularly luscious cakes and pies, was so abundant she had to let out the waistlines of her skirts before she was halfway across the continent. Everywhere a round of dinners, luncheons, picnics and parties seemed under way. Hospitality was engulfing. So was friendliness on buses.

HER SECOND impression was one shared by the other returned travelers—that of Americans' remoteness from conditions in other countries. Yet she was struck by how the average American, though suspicious of "foreign propaganda," was deeply interested in obtaining factual knowledge of conditions abroad when it came from firsthand experience and was given by someone he trusted.

Miss B. found the United States of today "even more unreal" than the one she left in April. It seemed to her a glittering city in a desert that momentarily would turn out a mirage. At other times she felt as if she were a Martian. What struck her particularly was the absorption in irrelevancies, the emphasis on clothes, entertainment, display, piddling activities—all reflecting the swing of business and personal pursuits into "good old days" grooves. In the big cities, which she visited chiefly, she found much of the same indifference to the world's plight, the same engrossment in personal concerns Mrs. A. did on her bus and in small towns.

MRS. C., back on this continent after 11 years and after saddening experiences in Europe with hungry children and displaced people, found America's abundance unbelievable, its waste shocking, and its mood one of "conscious self-absorption," which she thought might be based on trying to escape unpleasant facts. However, after a period of comfortable living, she found herself drifting into exactly the same mood, the same concerns; she became alarmed, and got a job with a relief organization.

All of these returned natives had the same experience of being at first astounded, then angry, but finally understanding of the detached and unreal atmosphere they found in their country. They all ended up by facing a reality themselves—that most people learn only in the "dear school" of personal experience; that Americans who have not seen and felt directly the bombs of battle or the chaotic aftermath of war can't be expected to understand easily the perils that lie beyond their Main Streets.

This poses the problem for those who believe this Nation must either accept its world responsibilities or sink. They will have to find some way of clearly and dramatically, making people of America realize what the world situation means to their own long-term interests.

Doing this will be doubly hard since they will have to contend with those plying the easier trade of appealing to people's fear, suspicion, parsimony and self-delusion. Yet as all the many appraisals Americans are getting these days credit them with being open-minded, fair and resourceful, there is little doubt they will rise to their traditional greatness when and if the facts of life pierce their dream world. But there is grave danger this may happen too late.

Grain And Hogs

I am generally in such complete accord with the cartoonist, Herblock, it is not without regret that I make the charge that he is completely "off the beam" in the recent cartoons in which he undertakes to show that hogs are being fattened with food that could be used to feed starving children.

In the first place, it is obvious that to decrease the supply of pork in the United States at this time would be false economy; if we are to have pork, hogs must be fed—unless we are to return to the system which was in effect in the early period of the New Deal when thousands of pigs were destroyed.

Secondly, much of the grain that is fed to hogs is unfit for human consumption, and without hogs to eat this class of grain it would be wasted; of course this could be used to enlarge the rat population. And, speaking of rats, it seems to me that if a small part of the effort which is about to be put forth to induce the people of America to eat less were to be devoted to an all-out effort to exterminate these pests, enough food would thereby be saved to meet our own needs and also a considerable portion of the needs of the people of Europe.

Calling Washington

Horse And Buggy Diplomacy

PARIS, FRANCE.—Americans working backstage to try to set the scenery for the Marshall Plan found themselves in an unhappy predicament. Theoretically, they were the producers of the show. Yet they could not be entirely sure that it would ever have a single performance.

The elaborate maneuvering, the backing and filling, illustrate perfectly the supreme difficulty of carrying out a positive foreign policy when the powers of the American Government are divided between the two parties. If so much did not turn on the outcome, it would have an almost comic aspect.

While the committees of the 16 participating nations were doing their homework, the Americans acting as liaison agents hovered nervously in the background. They occasionally peeked at the figures on imports and balance of payments and what they saw was not reassuring. They had the look of a hopeful youngster about to submit a Christmas list to an indulgent uncle.

But such was the position of the United States that intervention at that stage, at any rate, was impossible. If we had played teacher and had said that the plan must take this form or that form, then the responsibility would be ours. And that responsibility the American stage managers simply could not assume, since the Congress was not committed in any way to putting up the money so the show could go on.

Not until the Christmas list was completed and submitted privately for American approval before publication was it possible to act. Then it became perfectly obvious that publication of the proposals drawn up by the 16 nations would end the Marshall Plan once and for all.

THE 29 - billion - dollar total may have been an error. In the aftermath it has been put down to the mistaken assumption of a newspaper correspondent. But certainly the estimate of needs from the United States for the 1948-51 period was far beyond anything Congress would consider.

At that point a great number of urgent cables flew back and forth across the Atlantic. In the role of kindly counselor, Undersecretary of State Will Clayton arrived on the scene. After certain misunderstandings had been cleared up, the 16 nations were in effect told to go back and do their homework over again, since they had come up with a disastrous answer.

The second try was better. The figure of approximately 22.5 billion dollars is regarded as a practical, working figure. Yet again it was felt necessary to sharpen the pencils and do at least part of the sums all over. That is why many of the experts who worked in Paris throughout the summer have now been summoned to Washington.

It may seem futile at this point to recite the birth pangs of the infant plan. In my opinion, however, it is important to keep these difficulties in mind. They should be duly taken into account when the plan is incorporated in legislation and submitted to Congress.

You cannot expect perfection or anything remotely like it when the whole approach must be tentative and conditional. The end result is fairly certain to be tentative and to have the weaknesses of timidity and overcaution.

THE BRITISH have been accused in some quarters of taking a lukewarm interest in the success of the Marshall Plan, meanwhile keeping an eye out for other possibilities. If this is true, one can hardly blame them. They know better than most Europeans the uncertainties of our system of divided powers and especially in an election year when both sides of the divide are out to make political capital.

In the present state of the British economy it would be a perilous risk to put all the British eggs in the American basket. Congress might decide to make an omelette by the simple method of tossing the basket out the Senate window.

An important delegation of Labor members of Parliament is just now touring eastern Europe, with a stop in Moscow and a call on Joseph Stalin on the schedule. Their announced purpose is to explore avenues of expanded British trade with that part of the world.

Besides the handicap inherent in the very nature of our approach to such a great undertaking as the Marshall Plan, there is another handicap. It is the inadequacy of American personnel abroad—in terms of numbers and all too often in terms of quality.

Moving from capital to capital, Undersecretary Clayton worked prodigiously hard this summer. But he has been preoccupied with what is in the last analysis a noble dream—the multilateral trade organization. That dream seems to have less and less relation to present-day reality.

The American experts working at Paris on the Marshall Plan lacked both authority and stature. It is high time that we looked at the deficiencies in our Foreign Service organization. Whether considered on an emergency or a long-term basis, some drastic changes are needed. You cannot expect to do a job in the mid-twentieth century—in the atomic era—with an organization geared to 50 years ago.

Migrant Labor

By Agnes E. Meyer

Cooperative Camps Succeed in N. Y.

(Fourth of a Series)

During the war the bean acreage increased in Erie County, N. Y., 125%, and the over-all increase in canning crops was 54%. As the farmers are trying to maintain this production, their permanent source of legal labor is a critical problem, but none of them, not even those with a large child labor force, seemed worried about the outcome. Having met the war crisis with State and Federal help, they have confidence in the future.

But with the obvious need for more Southern labor, there is at present but one cooperative migrant worker camp in Erie County. It was originally built at Brant by the Federal Farm Security Administration. Now it has been taken over by Erie County Farm Labor Cooperative with an active membership of 55 farmers.

These farm labor cooperatives have been organized throughout the State with the encouragement, assistance and guidance of the Extension Service to build and sponsor labor housing, to compute total labor requirements, consolidate contracting procedures and generally take over their own labor problems when the Federal Extension Service drops out of the picture. Nobody has much confidence that these "Coops" can stick together when the support given them by the Extension Service disappears.

Has Excellent Facilities

The camp at Brant has the excellent facilities typical of Federal standards, well constructed cabins, cook shacks, shower baths and laundry facilities. A good commissary with prevailing prices is run by the camp manager rather than the crew leader. Rent per cabin is $1 a week.

Neither workers nor crew leaders seemed to me of the dependable type. The camp manager cheerfully agreed with me, though the quality of the labor he gets is his chief responsibility to his employers. One gang he picked off the road had just left without warning, taking extra workers with them as well as the camp blankets. When I asked another crew leader why they had left, he replied: "Well, you know, they just leave sometime, all the time."

This irresponsibility is deeply ingrained in a large proportion of migratory labor whether black or white. It is exactly what we must expect from people who have never had civic responsibilities, steady work, educational discipline or any private property aside from the few possessions they carry with them. Will the New York State farmers have either the time or the patience to cope successfully with such labor when the Federal machinery disappears?

Workers Dissatisfied

This year, moreover, the workers left Florida in a dissatisfied frame of mind because three successive crop failures from frost, floods and drought had exhausted their resources. They were further discouraged by a poor succession of crops in all Eastern States, also due to erratic weather conditions, which complicated the whole migratory problem for workers, growers and Government officials.

It is under unusual strains of this kind that the close coordination of Federal and State extension services is invaluable. Although some workers lost days waiting for crops to ripen, and growers frequently waited for belated crews, the coastal network of Federal and State services, the crop reports, routing and information stations overcame much of the chaos which would have resulted without this close cooperation.

Like this first camp at Brant, most of the 30-odd others I visited in some 20 counties showed the results achieved through the cooperative endeavors of the eight State agencies—labor, agriculture and markets, health, welfare, education, police, youth commission and extension services—that have pooled their work through the State Interdepartmental Committee on Migrant Camps.

Came From Intensive Study

This committee resulted from an intensive study of migratory problems undertaken by a special wartime group appointed by Governor Dewey for that purpose in 1942. Officially, the commissioners of each department are members of the committee, though most of the actual work is performed by members of their staffs. The planning of the committee takes place during the winter months. It concentrates upon one or two major problems every year. On the whole, its endeavors represent one of the best examples I have encountered of cooperative administration to handle every aspect of a given problem without duplication of effort or waste of the taxpayers' money.

The first act of this committee was to rewrite chapter 1 of the sanitary code to establish minimum requirements as to housing and sanitation and fix responsibility for maintenance of satisfactory conditions in all migrant camps. Its recommendations are always worked out in cooperation with the Association of New York State Canners or with the Conference Board of Farm Organizations, thus enlisting their participation in development of the program.

This procedure and the discussions that ensue have proved of great educational value to these growers and has gained their support for proposals which they violently opposed two or three years ago. In 1946 the State Legislature passed a bill which gives teeth to the enforcement of the housing and sanitary code. But the committee has been obliged to crack down only once upon a recalcitrant grower. It is deeply convinced that persuasive education has more lasting value than force, since improvement can only come as a result of action by the canners and growers.

War Of Nerves

By Barnet Nover

Are Russian Tactics Succeeding?

NOVER

THE TENOR of the discussion in the United Nations General Assembly on the Greek problem far more clearly than the actual votes would indicate that Russia is making real headway in her war of nerves against the West.

One by one, nations that have been sympathetic to the American position on that problem and critical of the Soviet attitude have begun to show an increasing unwillingness to stick by us all the way.

The United States had proposed that the General Assembly do what, because of the Russian veto, the Security Council failed to do, namely, condemn Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania for aiding the Greek guerillas. The American resolution also urged the reestablishment of the now dissolved Balkan Boundary Commission to watch developments along the Greek border.

FRANCE, Sweden, Norway, Cuba, Ethiopia and some other countries made it clear in the Assembly that they hesitated to as far as the United States desires.

They are seeking a compromise between the Russian and American views on the Greek problem, as though there can be a compromise between right and wrong, between truth and falsehood. They do not want Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania condemned, even though all the evidence proves their guilt so far as intervention in Greece is concerned, because they do not want to antagonize Russia.

They and an increasing number of the smaller nations, members of the U. N., are afraid. They see themselves ground between two giant millstones, one Russia, the other the United States. They are now desperately trying to get out of the way.

There is, at present a limit beyond which they are unwilling to go in mollifying Russia. Thus, in the Political Committee, the great majority voted in favor of the establishment of a permanent U. N. border watch in Greece. Nonetheless they are uneasy over the entire Greek issue which they see as one aspect of an endless Russian-American conflict which alarms them.

THIS MOOD of panic happens to be precisely the mood which Russia sought to generate by the fierce barrage of propaganda she has been laying down against the West and particularly the United States.

The purpose of that barrage, with its shrill emphasis on alleged American "warmongering," was to create a war psychosis. This, if the discussions in the General Assembly are any indication, is just what is now beginning to happen.

Of course the Russian propaganda campaign is a weapon which can recoil against its users.

The men in the Kremlin undoubtedly know that. They are aware that the fear which is beginning to grip the little nations of the West may begin to grip the Russian people, too. They have sought to prevent that by feeding them an antidote together with the poison. Typical of this technique is the following reassuring passage in the resolution setting up a new Cominform.

"The forces which stand for peace are so considerable and great that if they are firm and solid in the cause and defense of peace . . . then the plans of the aggressors will suffer complete collapse."

ANOTHER way in which the Kremlin's war of nerves can recoil against its users is in stiffening rather than weakening the American will to resist Moscow's bid for power.

This, in fact, is precisely what has happened. The American position toward Russia has steadily hardened. But the Soviet leaders probably anticipated this and discounted it.

Where the effect of the Soviet campaign has been greatest has been among the little nations that stand between the United States and the USSR. They realize that the United States is no menace to their security, their liberty, their sovereignty. They look to us for that aid without which their recovery will be long delayed.

They do fear the Soviet Union. They fear war even more and instinctively they recoil from it and from any suggestion of it. The danger is that, in this mood, they may adopt the policy of that ancient Near Eastern tribe which worships the devil in the form of a peacock on the ground, that since God is good it is not necessary to propitiate Him. The little nations may decide that the course of safety lies in propitiating Satan. If this happens, Russia's war of nerves will have justified itself.

Arlington Tax Delay Denied By Official

Harry K. Green, Arlington Commissioner of Revenue, yesterday denied responsibility for delay in billing Arlington County property owners for their 1947 real estate taxes.

Clyde B. Stovall, Republican candidate for Green's office, recently accused the commissioner of postponing the new, heavier tax levy until after the November 4 elections, to avoid possible taxpayer resentment at the polls.

Green asserted the Commissioner of Revenue "is not charged with the preparation or sending out of the tax bills" and added that the duty rests with Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green, a Republican.

He said the treasurer "was delayed in getting his tax tickets (bills) from the printer until August 15" due to a printers' strike. The commissioner of revenue's office "started to deliver all tax rolls to the treasurer August 14," he said, charging the treasurer has "not been delayed a single day" because of the commissioner of revenue.

The commissioner added he believed it "unfair" to accuse either the commissioner or the treasurer of "delaying their work for political purposes."

Meantime, Talmage Wilcher, Republican candidate for the Virginia State Senate from Arlington, injected yesterday fare increases granted Arnold Bus Lines last week by the ICC into the county political situation, calling the boosts "an unfair raid on our pocketbooks."

Falls Church To Get Water Report Soon

A preliminary survey of the proposed water main linking Falls Church with Dalecarlia Reservoir should be ready for Falls Church Town Council by October 27, it was learned yesterday.

The council has voted to petition Fairfax Circuit Court to set a date for a referendum to authorize a tentative $800,000 bond issue to finance the 24-inch line.

Bernard Locraft, civil engineer making the survey, said the main would cross the Potomac River at Snake Island, a half mile north of Chain Bridge, to a pumping station on the Virginia shore.

Falls Church now buys water from Arlington County to supplement its own well. Locraft and Roy F. Dunn, Falls Church town manager, conferred yesterday with officials of the District's Dalecarlia Reservoir to discuss the project.

Truman Asks AFL for More Production

San Francisco, Oct. 8 (AP).—President Truman appealed in a message to the American Federation of Labor today to raise still higher America's level of production to "meet the critical conditions which threaten the well-being of the entire world."

At the same time he warned of the necessity of "remedies" in the domestic economy of the Nation to cope with "unreasonable" prices and "insufficient" housing.

The President's message, read to the AFL's sixty-sixth annual convention, called upon America's workers to share the Nation's abundance with the less fortunate, inasmuch as the production level today is greater than ever before in peacetime. The need for grain, Mr. Truman added, "in many countries in the year ahead will be even more acute than in the past."

"I know, too," he said, "that labor and industry, recognizing the seriousness of the situation abroad, will cooperate to raise the production level still further."

Joseph A. Padway, the federation's general counsel, prior to becoming suddenly ill, had been discussing implications of the Taft-Hartley labor law, and warned the federation "we are on the threshold of a Government by injunction—not by private employers but by the Government itself."

The AFL, the attorney said, might find it necessary to revert to its old anti-injunction crusade which it waged prior to passage of the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

The case of John L. Lewis, he warned, was "not closed." In this celebrated labor injunction case, Lewis was found guilty of contempt of court and the United Mine Workers fined $3,500,000 for refusing to obey a strike restraining order obtained by the Government in Federal Court.

"The Lewis case will rise again," Padway declared. "The United Mine Workers will yet gain victory."

He also said that since that case was settled, the miners had obtained a contract recently in which the fine "was paid many times over with interest and costs."

Housing Situation Criticized

The housing situation was criticized by Lee F. Johnson, executive vice president of the National Public Housing Conference.

Addressing the convention, Johnson accused Congress of truckling to the national real estate lobby. He declared "Let's not fool ourselves, they have thus far whipped us on every front."

"Labor costs cannot be blamed honestly for the tremendous rise in housing costs today," he said.

"Of course there has been an increase, there must be, but the wage increase of building tradesmen is small indeed in comparison to the profits that are being taken all along the line by the privileged interests which are calling the shots in Congress today."

Johnson singled out Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), of the joint congressional committee investigating housing, as one "who is doing a fine job of dancing to the music of the real estate boards."

He praised Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) for his efforts in having the Senate Banking and Currency Committee report out the general housing bill.

Girl Has Johnny Meyer Arrested

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—John W. Meyer, party-giving press agent for Howard Hughes, was arrested today at a stormy session in one of his favorite night clubs, El Morocco, on the charge that he fathered the child of a cigarette girl.

Miss Miles

After a brief visit to the Tombs, Meyer was freed at 5 a. m. on $500 bail, which he furnished. He drove off with friends.

Patricia Miles, the 25-year-old cigarette vendor who contends that the press agent is the father of her 8 months old son, went to the police station where Meyer was questioned, but did not see him.

Miss Miles had sworn out a warrant, which could not be served until Meyer returned to New York State, while he was in Washington testifying in the Senate War Investigating Committee probe of Hughes' airplane contracts.

At that time, Meyer denied Miss Miles' charge, asserting "I never took her out in my life" and adding "she worked till 5 a. m." He repeated the denial today.

ATTENTION LIQUOR BUYERS!

There is a possibility that because of the humanitarian effort to rush food to starving peoples there will be some interruption in the supply of beverage liquors.

The Star Liquor Store announces that regardless of any interruption in supply it will continue the same equitable and non-discriminatory sales policy which prevailed here during the shortages brought on by the recent war. We have an adequate supply now to meet all needs and we hope that this situation will prevail. If it does not, our customers can be assured that our policy of fairness in distribution will continue.

This policy on December 13, 1943, attracted nation-wide attention when Life Magazine pictured crowds buying our beverages at the height of the shortage with the editorial remark:

"In Washington the Star Liquor Store disposes of all its available whiskey each week in a hectic one-hour sale; clerks serve long lines of customers on a first-come first-serve basis."

How did Russia get 3 U. N. votes? James Byrnes tells—see "Speaking Frankly," coming Oct. 15 in The Post craft on routine flights without pilots.

8000-Mile Pilotless Flight Hailed as Air Safety Advance

Col. James M. Gillespie, commander of the center and the transatlantic flight, put it this way:

"What we're trying to do is to improve general air safety, take some of the load off the pilot and enable planes to keep on scedules in all weather."

One military objective is to permit the Air Force to carry out strategic bombing and lend support to ground forces in even the worst weather. That would have helped during the Battle of the Bulge in 1945 when the front was clear but our air bases were "socked in."

Flight Meant to Convince

Only the more practical, economically feasible features of their system are expected to be applied. There's not much point in automatic raising and lowering of wheels and flap. Or of forecasting wind speed and direction at the destination. The pilot can do it better when he approaches.

Purpose of the present flight was to show doubters—and there have been many—that it could be done.

"Now we've done everything at once," said Kelsey. "We've shown that we can do any part of it."

Judge Withholds Decision in Bank Hearing

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Judge Sterling Hutcheson late today took under advisement petitions for new trials filed by seven of nine defendants found guilty this spring on charges of aiding and abetting in the misapplication of more than $435,000 from a Fredericksburg Bank.

Judge Hutcheson announced that he would have a decision in the matter as promptly as possible but that he felt he must withhold it "for the time being." He explained that he was called to sit at the hearing suddenly and was not completely familiar with the original case and had not examined the motion.

His announcement came at the end of a day-long hearing on the petitions. During the day, Judge J. Waties Waring, who tried the 53-day long case, disqualified himself and was called upon to testify as was Assistant District Attorney George R. Humrickhouse, who handled the case for the government.

The motions for the new trials were brought on the grounds that during the trial an attempt was made to bribe a juror, and that this attempt was known to Judge Waring, who did not impart the information to defendants' counsel.

In his testimony, Judge Waring said a juror, Thomas L. Madison, came to his chambers during the last week of the trial in April and told him he had been approached and offered money to hang the jury. Judge Waring said Madison told him that his opinion would in no way be influenced by what had happened and the jurist said he suggested that the matter be confidential and asked Humrickhouse to investigate.

Fredericksburg Road Made 'Limited Access'

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—A third stretch of "limited access" highway has been established by State Highway Department on the alternate Route 1 by-pass at Fredericksburg. Other "limited access" roads are the Newport News and Norfolk by-passes.

Under an act of the 1942 Legislature, the department has authority to declare certain roads to be highways of "limited access," that is, no vehicles may enter or leave the roads except at certain designated points. The Fredericksburg by-pass will not come under immediate control, it was explained, and the major effect of the department's announcement will be to prevent development of side roads intersecting the four-lane divided roadway.

McGregor Quits Attorney General's Staff

Douglas W. McGregor of Houston, Tex., resigned yesterday as assistant to the Attorney General and received President Truman's "highest commendation" for his public service.

McGregor

He was forced to step down because of family illness that requires his return to Texas.

As Attorney General Tom C. Clark's assistant, a post he assumed a year ago, McGregor had general supervision over the Justice Department's various divisions and bureaus, was the "boss" for U. S. attorneys and marshals, and handled legislative matters.

Clark appointed Peyton Ford, Assistant Attorney General in Charge of the Claims Division, as his acting assistant and said Ford's post will be filled temporarily by Herbert A. Bergson, Ford's first assistant.

Gambling Loss Suit Bobs Up In Court Again

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8 (AP).—A case involving gambling losses at "Jimmy's Place" in Prince Georges County bobbed up again today in the Court of Appeals when employers of Harry W. Wilson sought to recover $33,886.52.

The high court last year ruled in favor of Wilson in a suit which resulted in a judgment for $30,000 to the use of the employers, Fred H. Ugast, John W. Lyles and Milton E. Groome.

In today's case, the three, who operate Capital Service stations, sought to recover money they claimed Wilson as their bookkeeper had "misappropriated" without their knowledge and gambled away. Named as defendants in the case were James A. LaFontaine, the Maryland Athletic Club, Inc., and Charles Price.

The suit was separate from that originally brought by Wilson and had been removed from Prince Georges to Montgomery, and finally to Howard County.

Representing the plaintiffs, both individually and collectively, are the District firms of Duckett, Gill and Anderson and Mason, Spalding and McAtee, both with offices in the Tower Building, and Attorney John L. Clark, of Ellicott City, Md.

Attorneys for the defendants include Charles E. Ford, 416 5th st., nw; Jerome Loughren of Ellicott City, Md., and the Baltimore law firm of Carmen, Anderson and Barnes.

Donal L. Chamberlin, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington will deliver the address of welcome. The ceremony on the armory steps will be televised by WNBW, which later will televise the show.

The exposition will be open daily from 1 to 1:30 p. m., continuing through October 19.

First Truman-in-'48 Buttons Appear Here

"Truman-for-President" buttons made their first appearance in Washington yesterday—right under the Chief Executive's nose.

Mr. Truman smiled but made no comment when Mrs. India Edwards, associate director of the Democratic National Committee, showed up for his broadcast to American women wearing two bright buttons calling for a Truman election victory in 1948.

One was red and white, the other blue and white.

'Daybreak' Gets A Happy Ending

By Richard L. Coe

A PHONY COAT of realism doesn't keep "The Long Night," at Keith's, from being sugary sentimentality.

"The Long Night" certainly tries to be different, but Hollywood's self-imposed marriage with sweetness and light in the bonds of the Production Code makes its hero's sufferings somewhat nonsensical.

Added to the fundamental story flaw are some completely unconvincing minor characters of a Pennsylvania mill town, an unlikely feud between a chief of police and a sheriff (there may be such feuds, but at least one of the parties should show some sense) and a lot of synthetic references to the plight of veterans.

"The Long Night" is a retelling of "Daybreak" ("Le Jour Se Leve"), which the French made with Jean Gabin in 1940. The story told of a railroad laborer who murdered in a frenzy of jealousy, if not actually of love. He is trapped in his room, refuses to surrender and is killed by the police.

John Wexley's adaptation tones down the passionate reasons for the murder and ultimately bows to our native insistence on a happy ending by leaving the audience free to imagine that a plea of self-defense may acquit the man.

The motivation for the crime, or, indeed, any of the characters' actions, is now so vague as to make them seem foolish. There has apparently been little but money words between the hero and his girl. The girl herself is a sweet gentle child who surely has done nothing to evoke such violence.

The boy—and he is literally a boy, not the lusty man of middle years of "Daybreak"—is a millworker and, in Henry Fonda's gentle playing and slight physique, is completely unconvincing. The villain is an unlikely magician whose presence in the town is more logical than his pursuit of the girl. For she has certainly done nothing to hide from her millworker, which deception was the pith of the original.

"THE LONG NIGHT." RKO-Radio release produced by Robert and Raymond Hakim and Anatole Litvak. Screenplay by John Wexley from a story by Jacques Viot. Directed by Litvak. Music by Dimitri Tiomkin. At RKO-Keith's.

THE CAST

Joe	Henry Fonda
Jo Ann	Barbara Bel Geddes
Maximilian	Vincent Price
Charlene	Ann Dvorak
Sheriff	Howard Freeman
Chief of Police	Moroni Olsen
Frank	Elisha Cook, Jr.
Janitor's Wife	Queenie Smith
Bill	David Clarke
Policeman	Charles McGraw
Peggy	Patty King
Freddie	Robert A. Davis

Unconvincing 'Realism'

As if to compensate for plot deficiencies thus made necessary by our national culture (at least, our national culture as the movies force themselves to believe it is), the tawdry settings are stressed. The fact remains that the milltown setting is completely makebelieve.

And the suggestion that the hero is mentally off balance as a result of the wartime battles he has seen is cheap and sloppy. Cries of the crowd to the trapped man to come down and be acquitted are no more credible. A thrown-in shot of a blind veteran who doesn't know for some hours that the man is his friend, is just one more dash of the sentimentality of a confused approach to what is, after all, a subject alien to the Hollywood screen.

By this, I am not saying "Daybreak" shouldn't have been remade by Hollywood. But under the present setup, including motivations by decree and not nature and a conceivably happy ending, any such attempt is bound to be spurious. And no matter what is added to make the entity appear real and terrible, particularly when sincerity seems insincere, the attempt is foredoomed.

Director Anatole Litvak and a cast headed by Fonda, Barbara Bel Geddes, Vincent Price and Ann Dvorak wrestle with the impossible. Miss Bel Geddes is an interesting newcomer, blessed with a face not yet drawn and quartered to the mold of Gold Coast gelatin. Dimitri Tiomkin's score is impressive.

"THE 49TH STATE," Keith's main short subject, is a compelling report on Hawaii, to which Statehood would mean much. It's one of the "This Is America" series which manages to take away the raty-tat-tat pomposity that characterizes the you-know-which that marches. It seems likely that, with its impressive reasoning, this short subject may prove of real influence. The House of Representatives last June approved Statehood for Hawaii, and now it's up to the Senate next session. Despite the recurringly decorative features of the hula girls which the picture insists are unimportant aspects of Hawaiian life, "The 49th State" does tell you some things you mightn't have realized about the hopeful island.

TOMORROW: Did you read "The Foxes of Harrow?" Though he didn't, Richard L. Coe will tell you about the film version at the Palace.

Movie 'Barber' Is Stentorian But Great Voices Are There

By Paul Hume

Last year we saw the "Barber of Seville" on the stage of Constitution Hall. Last night we beheld it there once more, but how changed.

Ferruccio Tagliavini

Real scenery, real costumes, lighting and the feeling of space. Could it be that opera had come to Washington in style at last? Well, not exactly. Of course, you can take your choice about this film version of the old favorite. You can listen to it as you would to any opera performance. Or you can watch it as a movie. It is without question the loudest performance of any opera you have yet heard. As a movie, it is cluttered up with all kinds of unnecessary action, intended no doubt to enliven the whole business. It doesn't.

For instance, as Rosina is warbling about hearing a little tiny voice (Act II, Scene 1), she dances around her room looking like Sonja Henie summering in Seville. And when she throws that high "A" of hers right in her pet bird's face, who can blame him for making a rude gesture with his top feathers—if that's what they are?

No, seriously now, the music is all there. Not only what Rossini wrote but all the little frills and added show-offs that singers have been adding for over a century. Ferruccio Tagliavini sounds as beautiful as ever, which is plenty beautiful. But the real star among the vocalists, and he's the best-looking man in the crowd as well, is Tito Gobbi. As Figaro, he tosses off vocalism, stage business and a terrific personality. Even through the cruel over-amplification employed throughout the film, it is clear beyond doubt that Gobbi is one of the few great baritones living today.

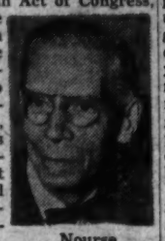
Next in line for singing laurels is Italo Tajo, whose bass makes one remember the younger Pinza. Both Tagliavini and Tajo will appear in recital at Constitution Hall this winter. Best scene drmatically in the whole affair is that in which Tajo, as Don Basilio, describes the birth and growth of a slanderous rumor. Were the whole opera carried out at this level of acting, we would feel as enthusiastic about the staging and direction as we do about the music itself.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Inflation Imminent, Cabinet Told Flatly

By Drew Pearson

Edwin Nourse, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, is quite a cautious man. It is his job, as defined by an Act of Congress, to advise the President on the economic state of the Nation, in order to avoid depression. As such, he makes monthly reports, and last week presented a full-dress report to the entire Cabinet.



Nourse

According to word leaking out of the Cabinet meeting, Nourse, for the first time, was categoric and definite that something should be done about the danger of inflation—or the results might be serious indeed. He had warned of this before, but last week he laid it on the line.

Nourse did not recommend any one concrete course to stop inflation, but threw out several alternatives, among them using the laws already passed by Congress to regulate inflation.

Attorney General Tom Clark promptly spoke up to inform the Cabinet that a battery of legal powers already existed for meeting the crisis. He promised to study them and report on which could be dusted off and used effectively.

President Truman suggested an investigation of the Chicago grain market which has traded eight billion bushels of wheat, despite the fact that the total U. S. wheat crop is only 1,500,000,000. Truman urged Secretary of Agriculture Anderson to put the heat on the speculators, and it is certain that Anderson will ask Congress for additional powers to crack down on the Chicago grain market.

Farm Leaders Cooperate

Farmers proverbially are supposed to be lukewarm about sending food to Europe. But two farm leaders who visited Truman lately have been just the opposite. One was Albert Goss, master of the National Grange; the other, James Patton, president of the Farmers Union. Both urged the President to take an even more vigorous stand to save food for Europe.

Patton, a big Rocky Mountain farmer who wears a black patch over one eye with the jaunty air of a buccaneer, gave this blunt advice:

"We shouldn't wait till the prairie fire completely consumes us. I suggest you call Congress together and meet the problem head-on. While I am going to support your Voluntary Citizens Food Committee, I'm afraid we're going to need a lot more than that. We're going to need selective rationing, price control and increased production—especially production to break the bottleneck of steel."

The President, however, demurred at such drastic action. He seemed a bit bruised and weary of his many battles with Congress, and complained to Patton that no other Chief Executive in years has had so many difficulties on Capitol Hill.

Now that Congress has decided to run with the ball, Truman indicated, he in turn is going to let them run. Having put the situation squarely before congressional leaders, the President said, it is now up to them to act.

Farm leader Patton also urged the President to make a frank statement on foreign policy, explaining to the American public how close we may be to World War III.

"If war is imminent," Patton boomed, "we ought to stop talking about universal military training and mobilize everyone. We ought to prepare for war and decentralize our cities."

But Truman shook his head. "If we have universal military training," he said, "the Russians will quiet down."

Inside the Kremlin

The Russian people still are being rationed, despite the fact that last year the Soviet cultivated 10 million more acres than before the war . . . Actually, Russia is now stockpiling wheat, apparently in preparation for "an emergency."

. . . Intelligence from Russia: The Red army is building large underground airdromes and munition dumps, some of them in the extreme eastern end of Siberia, not far from Alaska . . . U. S. military men aren't worried over the big Italian battleship being given to the Russians, even though it may be loaned to Tito and stationed in the Adriatic. Battleships aren't worth much these days . . . Despite this admission, the U. S. Navy is still going ahead with construction of two enormous new battleships which will carry no big guns. The Navy now finally admits that a battleship can't get near enough to another vessel to shoot it, so the only guns to be carried by the new battleships will be antiaircraft, to fire at attacking airplanes.

Palestine Partition Plan Gets Backing

Poland and Czechoslovakia Come Out For Proposal; Arabs Sound Warning

By John G. Rogers

Lake Success, Long Island, Oct. 8.—Poland and Czechoslovakia became today the third and fourth United Nations members to come out in principle in support of a Palestine partition plan.

At the same session of the Palestine Committee of the U. N. General Assembly, Egypt delivered another Arab warning that trouble and strife in the Near and Middle East will follow in the wake of any attempted partition.

Meanwhile, Colombia proposed informally the immediate creation of a subcommittee to begin planning rehabilitation of displaced Jews in Europe, and El Salvador introduced a resolution commanding the Jews and Arabs to work out an agreed solution to the Holy Land problem.

It was persistently rumored today that the United States has decided to support, with modifications, the partition of Palestine.

American delegates said they were unable to comment on the American position and it appeared there would be no completely reliable hint of American intentions until Delegate Herschel V. Johnson addresses the Palestine Committee probably late this week.

The Polish speech, delivered by Josef Winiewicz, Ambassador to the United States, was the first on Palestine to be made by a member of the Russian bloc.

It was believed that the Polish speech did not tip off the Russian line on Palestine. While Poland came out for partition, it is known that Yugoslavia supports a federal binational Palestine, and the last word on the subject from Russia at the special Assembly session in April-May supported a binational state as first choice, with partition as a second choice.

Exiled Mufti Arrives For Talks With Arabs

Beirut, Lebanon, Oct. 8 (AP).—Ginger-bearded Haj Amin El Husseini, exiled Mufti of Jerusalem, has arrived by chartered plane from Cairo to participate in the Arab League's discussions here of armed resistance to Zionism in the Holy Land.

Riad Bey Es Solh, premier of Lebanon, said the Mufti "is a guest of the Lebanon Republic."

Cunningham Warns Of 'Chaos, Bloodshed'

Jerusalem, Palestine, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Sir Alan Cunningham, British high commissioner for Palestine, said today that chaos, misery and possibly bloodshed would follow the British evacuation if no solution or agreement were reached between Arabs and Jews.

Plane's Loop Shakes Up 53

the big ship, the captain said, it executed the first half of an outside loop and headed back in the direction from which it had come, flying upside down.

Clyde Miller of Oakland, Calif., said, "All the passengers were dumped out of their seats in a flash. It seemed as if the world was coming to an end. People and pieces of baggage were flying through the air, and the people were shouting and screaming."

"Only a few of the passengers had their safety belts fastened," he said, "and I saw one boy hanging by his feet from his safety belt."

Klint Umphress, Los Angeles, observed that "everybody was praying fervently."

There was no immediate official explanation of the mishap, but a Navy pilot aboard, Lieut. W. M. McGarson of Atlanta, Ga., said "My personal opinion is that the engines stalled, the plane lost flying speed and then went over on its back."

American officials at Dallas said it was an amazing incident but that the DC-4 was built to withstand "certain stresses," one of which was the outside loop, and "nothing important" gave way as the giant plane nosed over and did the flip.

Sisto and a fellow pilot, Capt. John Beck, were strapped into their seats and were able to fight the controls while the passengers floundered about helplessly in the cabin behind them.

Mrs. Irma Portis, San Diego, who had been dozing, said she awoke "spinning in midair."

Gets 'Klan' Threat

London, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Mrs. Barbara Ayrton Gould, Socialist member of Parliament, said today that she had been threatened 20 times by an organization calling itself the British section of the Ku Klux Klan. One letter contained a bullet and the warning: "This is like one you will get in your back."

D. C. Deposits In Unexpected 13-Million Rise

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined deposits of Washington's 19 banks showed an unexpected rise in the past three months, the first advance between calls since December 31, 1945.

The aggregate was $1,028,345,521 as of October 6, 1947, a gain of $13,287,705 since June 30, 1947, according to a compilation by The Washington Post made yesterday after the Comptroller of Currency issued a call for condition.

Sixteen of the 19 local institutions reported gains in deposits in the past three months. Some bankers seemed surprised at the general gain here, but one banker pointed out that loans had increased materially in recent months.

Local savings reached their all-time peak on December 31, 1945, when they aggregated $1,059,916,962. Since then, the trend had been steadily downward as attested by these figures on call dates: $1,039,347,041 on June 29, 1946; $1,026,355,507 on September 30, 1946; $1,024,769,447 on December 31, 1946; $1,015,057,816 on June 30, 1947.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Cotton futures closed $1.35 to $2.70 a bale higher today.

A lower-than-expected Department Forecast on the 1947 cotton crop stimulated broad trade and outside buying. Prices sped upward to gains of $4 a bale before reacting partially on profit-taking and hedging.

The Department of Agriculture forecast of 11,500,000 bales was 341,000 bales under the September estimate and about 150,000 bales lower than the average private forecast. Traders anticipated a continued tight situation in cotton supplies for the current season ending July 31 next year.

Mills, which had deferred covering contracts in futures in hopes of lower prices, bought heavily. They were also in a vulnerable position on actual cotton, since they have sold textiles well into the second quarter next year, but have been buying spot cotton mostly on the immediate need basis.

Kuhel Reported in Front for Nat Job

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

WELL, IT WAS a great week for the Yankees. They won a World Series and got rid of Larry MacPhail. That was a nice parlay to get over. A $6000 take for each of the players and the creature comforts of life without MacPhail. Peace, it's wonderful.

POVICH

The rampant redhead went out of the Yankees' life with all of the gusto with which he came into it. From the start, he whooped it up for the Yankees with girl shows before the game, nylon parades, a fancy saloon between the rafters for the station wagon set, locker-room invasions that finally made Manager Joe McCarthy and Bill Dickey quit, and fines that didn't endear him to the athletes.

And his farewell was in keeping. In quick succession, he resigned, reconsidered, and was finally bought out. Between decisions he punched a one-time friend in the eye for defending Branch Rickey, fell off the wagon, stole the headlines from his victorious ball players, and fell out with his two partners who helped him make two million dollars in three years.

A YANKEE ERA ENDS with MacPhail's leave-taking as president and boss of the club. Whether he fell or was pushed is unimportant. Without MacPhail, the Yankees will revert to the business of baseball, minus the hoopla. George Weiss, his successor as general manager, whom MacPhail tried to fire before he was moved out himself, is of the pre-MacPhail era when the Yankees were almost a sedate organization that frowned on sideshows.

There never was anything like MacPhail in baseball. He was the best promoter ever to hit the business. He thought up night baseball and made it go. He got the crowds into his parks at Cincinnati, Brooklyn and Yankee Stadium in numbers that broke all records. He made more money for himself and his partners than any group ever took out of the game.

He merchandised what baseball had to offer better than any man of his time or before him. He sold memberships to his fancy Stadium Club and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of season tickets before the Yankees opened the gates in April. He was a promotional bearcat. But Yankee players were in constant fear of his wrath.

SUPER SALESMAN MacPHAIL sold himself to the stockholders in all of the three big league towns he operated in, but he lacked the faculty of selling himself to Yankee players. He beat down the resistance of the other club owners and in a one-man campaign got A. B. Chandler elected to the $50,000 a year job as Commissioner.

When that happened, an old constitutent of MacPhail's ventured the prediction: "He got Chandler elected, but I'll wager the first man Chandler has trouble with is MacPhail." He was correct.

It was MacPhail who put Chandler on the spot with the charges against Leo Durocher. Twice this season, Chandler was forced to call MacPhail on the carpet for breaching the command of Chandler to keep his mouth shut on the Durocher issue.

With MacPhail's farewell to the game, Chandler got rid of a burr under his $50,000-a-year seat in the commissioner's office. For Chandler, the sun is shining once again, fish are leaping in the stream, and life is at its best.

THE BEST MONUMENT MacPhail leaves behind is the ball players' pension fund which he originated and sold to his fellow magnates, insuring five-year men $50 a month for life, and 10-year men $100. Paradoxically, the man who was no hero to his ball players gave the players' fraternity its best helping hand.

MacPhail's best promotional stunt was his promotion of Larry MacPhail into the presidency of the Yankees. He not only persuaded Del Webb and Dan Topping to put up the $2,850,000 that bought the club, he cut himself in for an equal share of the stock without putting up any big money. He was permitted to pay for his stock out of his share of the club's earnings. In 1945, he took a $50,000 salary, and $89,000 in bonuses out of the Yankees in addition to his stock earnings.

Rud Rennie, New York baseball writer, whom MacPhail once sued, yesterday wrote MacPhail's baseball obituary with evident relish. He said: "That final double play in the World Series was the greatest play ever made in baseball. It not only retired two Dodgers, it also retired MacPhail."

Irish Called Nation's Best, Michigan Is Rated Second

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Notre Dame, overwhelming victor in its only start to date, was selected by a cross-section of the Nation's sports writers today as the No. 1 college football team in the country, a position the Irish also enjoyed at the end of the 1946 campaign.

Among the 103 football experts who voted in the first Associated Press poll of the 1947 season, 52 of them placed Coach Frank Leahy's South Bend crew first on their ballots and 24 others ranked it second.

Although the writers had only the 40-6 triumph over Pitt in which to base their appraisal of the 1947 Notre Dame team, they obviously took into account the preseason reports that Leahy's material at least matches that which carried the Irish through 1946 without defeat.

Michigan Lands Second

Notre Dame was listed on 102 of the 103 ballots and was no lower than the sixth slot on any of them.

Michigan, Big Nine favorite with two impressive triumphs under its belt, landed the No. 2 position in the first of the season's weekly polls. The Wolverines, who were sixth in the final poll last season, drew 29 first-place votes and 46 for second place.

On the basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, nine for second, and so on, Notre Dame compiled 933 points, compared with 857 for Michigan.

Third place went to Texas, the team which led the voting in the first poll a year ago. The Longhorns, unbeaten in three starts, polled 15 first-place votes on the strength of their 34-0 win over North Carolina and wound up with 790 points. Texas finished in fifteenth place last year.

Army Trails Georgia Tech

Georgia Tech, which was eleventh last year, barely nosed out Army, the 1946 runner-up, for fourth place. Tech got three first-place votes and 542 points to Army's one first-place vote and 533 points. Each is unbeaten and unscored on in two starts.

Illinois, defending Big Nine champion, was voted the No. 6 position, with Pennsylvania, California, Georgia and Vanderbilt rounding out the first 10 in that order.

By way of comparison, the top 10 teams at the end of the 1946 season were Notre Dame, Army, Georgia, UCLA, Illinois, Michigan, Tennessee, Louisiana State, North Carolina and Rice, in that order.

Standing of the first 10 (first-place votes in parenthesis; points based on 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 system):

Team	Points
1—Notre Dame (32)	933
2—Michigan (29)	857
3—Texas (15)	790
4—Georgia Tech (3)	542
5—Army (1)	533
6—Illinois	454
7—Pennsylvania	395
8—California (1)	282
9—Georgia	178
10—Vanderbilt	152

The second ten: 11—Columbia, 103. 12—Penn State (1), 102. 13—Duke, 89. 14—Yale, 86. 15—Oklahoma, 77. 16—Rice, 52. 17—Minnesota (1), 41. 18—Mississippi, 36. 19—North Carolina, 35. 20—Southern California, 26.

Bus Service To Catholic U. Game Arranged

Catholic University officials have arranged round-trip bus transportation for fans who want to watch the Cardinals open their football season Saturday afternoon against Western Maryland College at Westminster, Md.

Chartered Capital Transit Co. buses will leave from the front of the C. U. gymnasium at noon Saturday. The trip back will begin right after the game ends. Round trip charge, plus admission to the game, will cost $3.

The Cardinals held their final heavy drill yesterday for the opener, and Coach Gene Augusterfer was impressed with the punting of Joe Mauiri of Pennsylvania, whose boots traveled over 55 yards almost every time. End Jackie Samperton, an excellent place-kicker, was propelling field goals from 30 yards away.

In the scrimmage, Halfback Gus Gersin stole the show with two 30-yard touchdown dashes. Gersin, a 170-pounder, is also a member of C. U.'s boxing team.

Armed May Take Money LeadToday

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Only two horses could be mustered to meet the mighty Armed in tomorrow's Sysonby handicap which the golden gelding is expected to win and thus top Stymie as world money-winning champion.

The pair entered against Warren Wright's Calumet comet are Oscar E. Breault's With Pleasure and Nelson Seabra's South American Ensueno, the latter a surprise entry.

TIME OUT—Eastern High's football coach, Dick Mentzer, calls aside the members of his starting line after a heavy workout in preparation for the big Central game Friday at Central Stadium. Both teams are undefeated in interhigh play. Eastern's line has proved itself the best among the District teams so far, having held defending champion Coolidge and Western to an accumulative 44 yards, and one touchdown, set up by enemy passes. Front row, left to right, Center Bob Harkey, Guard George Roberson, Coach Mentzer and Tackle Otis Brown. Back row, left to right, are Guard Bill Patterson, Tackle Dick Culp, and Ends Sonny Wesley and Johnny Brown. Mentzer has selected Otis Brown and Quarterback Sal DeGiorgi as Eastern's co-captains for the Central game

Lippy, Rickey Get Together In 'Social' Call

New York, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Brooklyn Dodger president Branch Rickey was a busy man today.

Besides taking part in his daily verbal sparring match with the newspapermen over the muddled Dodger managerial situation, he:

1. Conferred "socially" with his former manager Leo Durocher, who was back looking for his old job, which he lost last spring when suspended from baseball for one year by Commissioner Chandler.

2. Sent a belated unenthusiastic telegram of congratulations to the New York Yankees for winning the World Series.

3. And finally came up with the unstartling statement that he will "positively have a manager by March 1.

He refused to be backed into a corner on reports that he was through with Durocher and Burt Shotton, 63-year old pilot of the National League's championship team.

Asked point blank if Durocher would return to run the club now that his lone season suspension from baseball has been lifted by Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Rickey replied, "Frankly, I don't know.

"I'm not giving you any double-talk", he added. "Last year, I signed my manager in October and wound up at the start of the season without one. This year, I positively will have a manager by March 1, but not necessarily before then."

Durocher conferred with Rickey briefly tonight and a Dodger spokesman described the visit as "a social call," and said that Lippy immediately left for the airport where he was scheduled to leave for California at midnight.

Mrs. Glick Qualifie For Philly Golf

Philadelphia, Oct. 8 (AP).—Mrs. William Hokenjos, former New Jersey women's golf champion from West Orange, today upset Mrs. Harrison Flippin of Merion, Pa., one up on the nineteenth hole of opening round play in the second annual Huntingdon Valley Country Club's invitation women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Hokenjos was joined in the quarter-final round by Helen Sigel, medal winner, of Philadelphia; Mary A. Downey of Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. Maurice Glick, also of Baltimore.

Mrs. Glick defeated Mrs. Charles Hale, Philadelphia, 2 and 1.

U. S. May Tax Larry $450,000 on Sale

Federal taxes may take as much as $450,000 of the $2,000,000 for which Larry MacPhail sold his one-third share of the New York Yankee baseball club.

Tax experts said today that estimate appears justified on the basis of unofficial reports that MacPhail bought his interest in the club for $200,000 on January 25, 1945, and sold it for 10 times as much last week.

The $450,000 figure, a maximum, was obtained by applying the 25 per cent Federal capital gains tax rate to the apparent $1,800,000 gross profit on MacPhail's investment.

Bowie Bows In Club Golf

Tommy Webb, who was five strokes back of Buddy Bowie in the qualifying round, turned in the major upset yesterday as Columbia Country Club's annual golf championship went through its opening round.

Webb defeated Bowie, a former champion, 2 and 1 in the first flight.

The only match to go 18 holes went to another former titlist, Martin F. McCarthy, who won the final hole for a 2-up margin over Ed Hickey.

Other first flight clashes went to Col. Jesse Auton, 3 and 2, over George Ferris; Joe Barse, 3 and 2, over C. A. Slater; Ray Swearingen, 4 and 3, over W. E. Shannon; Billy Shea, 4 and 3, over Solon Kemon; Earle Skinker, 2 and 1, over Gen. Floyd Parks; and Don Buckingham, 4 and 3, over Col. Edward Hartshorn.

The Maid's Against It

First Day Diet Report: Haight Still Weighs 250½

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

THIS DIET FOR MEN isn't working so good. I was on it all day yesterday and didn't lose an ounce. Now don't get me wrong. I didn't expect my third chin to drop off at sundown. But I did expect the indicator on our bathroom scales to lean a bit leeward. When I got on it shook around some and then settled on 250½ and I couldn't even grunt it down any more.

It's no wonder, either. Where is the sting of a diet that gives you steak and broiled chicken on the first day? That's just like being back on an expense account.

I FOLLOWED THE exercise instructions, too. But instead of taking brisk 30-minute walks I waddled faster than usual to the $2 window eight times yesterday and once I went to the cashier's window to watch the people being paid off.

Everybody around our house seems enthused about my dieting except Mary, the maid. She didn't know I was standing in the hallway when she was upstairs making a bed. Mary was muttering something over and over. I stuck my ear around the corner and this is what I heard: "Diet again—diet again. Cook special this and special that and all he does is get more fat."

I sneaked away. I won't mind losing a pound or two, but I'll be darned if I'm going to lose a maid.

Baugh 'Figures' to Out-Pass Everybody in National League

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

All they have to do is surround Sammy Baugh with a few guys who know what to do when a football hits them in the stomach—hang on and run—and the Redskin "wheel" delivers the goods. This was demonstrated again yesterday as National Football League statistics, including the Skins' first two games, were released.

Baugh leads the league in the aerial department.

His passing artistry produced eight touchdowns, twice as many as his nearest competitor. He gave the impetus to 639 yards of marching, also twice as much as Bob Waterfield, the L. A. ace who ranked second.

Thirty-four completions in 62 tosses give old No. 33, starting his eleventh year of pro football, a percentage of 54.8, second only to the Chicago Cardinals', Paul Christman.

Proof of Baugh's receivers was in the fact one of them, End Hugh Taylor, was perched on top of the Eastern Division scoring column. Four touchdowns, all on Baugh passes, left the huge Oklahoman second only to the Cardinals' Harder, who has amassed 34 points.

Nussbaumer Mentioned

Taylor and Bob Nussbaumer rated just under Pittsburgh's Jansante as the East's best pass receivers, the first catching 11 aerials for 291 yards and the second taking 8 for 130. Nussbaumer's 65-yard dash with a Baugh pass was the longest in either division.

At punting Baugh was seventh in the league with a 42.9 average while Jack Jacobs, former Redskin now with the Packers, was tops at 51.1.

The Eagles' Steve Van Buren was making a strong bid to regain the ground-gaining title he won in 1945, amassing 203 yards in 38 tries for an average of 5.3 His yardage was the highest although the average rated sixth.

Best Washington gainer, surprisingly enough, was Sal Rosato who played his first game last Sunday and gained 61 yards in 12 times. The effort put him sixth in the east.

Credit to an aggressive and worthy performer was in the kick-off return repartment, where Scramblin' Eddie Saenz led the Eastern Division with 262 yards in eight trips. His 94-yard return of a Philadelphia kickoff for a touchdown was barely beaten by Van Buren's dash for 95 yards.

48 for Season

At the rate he's going Baugh should throw 48 touchdown passes this season, doubling his previous high in 1943 . . . he's already gained a third of his 1943 yardage in one sixth of the season . . . Advance men for the New York Giant invasion of Griffith Stadium Sunday were in town yesterday, predicting a "vindictive" attitude for Steve Owen's lads after their 23-0 beating by Philadelphia . . . against the threat of Baugh they bemoaned the fact New York has no real passer to replce Frank Filchock . . . the Redskins may have considerable line trouble Sunday if notices on the Giant forward wall mean anything . . . "Crenshaw is coming," announced Redskin General Manager Dick McCann yesterday, and to unimpressed sportswriters he explained . . . Crenshaw is a mongrel pup—"looks a little like a fox terrier"—which attached itself to the Skins' camp at Occidental College during training . . . he'll be flown here (no servicemen will be bumped) to fill the harness of Heinie and Duchess, mascots of the 1937 and 1942 world champions.

Captains of Ryder Team

Portland, Oreg., Oct. 8 (AP).—Walter Hagen and Craig Wood, veteran United States golfers, will be honorary co-captains of this country's Ryder Cup team for the matches here November 1 and 2, Robert A. Hudson, sr., said today.

Browns Cool On Boudreau

St. Louis, Oct. 8 (AP).—General Manager Bill DeWitt of the St. Louis Browns today confirmed reports that a proposed trade involving player-manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians and seven other players had been discussed by the two clubs but said negotiations had been called off at the Browns' request.

Asked whether there was any chance of a resumption of talks, DeWitt replied "there is nothing on it at this time."

DeWitt said the deal fell through because the Cleveland club had not given the Browns permission to sound out Boudreau on his attitude toward "moving over to our team as a player." He added that Boudreau would not be contacted without such permission.

"Here is the deal we were offered," DeWitt said. "The Indians offered us Boudreau, Outfielder George Metkovich and Pitchers Red Embree and Bryan Stephens for four of our players, Shortstop Vern Stephens, Pitchers Bob Muncrief and Jack Kramer and Outfielder Paul Lehner.

Identity of 1948 Pilot Due Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The name of Joe Kuhel took first place yesterday in the wide speculation over the successor to Ossie Bluege as manager of the Washington club for 1948.

President Clark Griffith of the Nats indicated that he would have an announcement today but otherwise refused to confirm an earlier report that the job would go to Kuhel, his 41-year-old former first baseman.

Presumably under consideration also are Muddy Ruel, manager of the Browns, and Rick Farrell and Sammy West, coaches with the Nats. But Griffith's particular fondness for Kuhel as a heady ballplayer is well known.

During this season Kuhel was given his release as a player by the Chicago White Sox and sent to Hot Springs, Arkansas, as manager of their farm team in the Cotton States League.

Would Follw Precedent

The appointment of Kuhel would follow precedent by Griffith, whose four managers since 1923 have been former members of the Washington club.

It was stated definitely at Griffith Stadium that Griffith's new appointee would not be a playing manager, thus precluding any promotion of a player from the ranks.

Kuhel was with the Nats for a stretch of eight years after being bought from the Kansas City Club in 1930 for $65,000 and was rated the finest fielding first baseman of his time.

Went to Chisox in 1938

He was swapped to the White Sox in 1938 in a deal for Zeke Bonura and later brought back to the Nats at the waiver price in 1944. In 1944 he was sold to Chicago on waivers.

Any attempt by Griffith to make a deal with the Browns that might bring Muddy Ruel, his former catcher, to Washington as manager hit a snag yesterday.

The Browns canceled their proposed trade with Cleveland that would have brought Lou Boudreau to thee St. Louis club as manager. That deal which failed had offered the possibility that Ruel would be available for the Washington managerial job.

Coach Advised To Take 'Powder' Against Ga. Tech

Lexington, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—A Virginia Military Institute follower from down Louisiana way sent the Keydet football team and its coach, Arthur (Slick) Morton, a gift today which he said might "fortify" them against their opponents on Saturday, mighty Georgia Tech.

The gift: Three boxes of aspirin and a packet of headache powder.

The advice: (1) Divide the contents of the medicine packets evenly among members of the VMI coaching staff; (2) "Ignore" Georgia Tech—"they might not show up for the game;" and (3) Be careful to hold out enough men to field a team against Richmond U. next week.

Morton, fearful of what will happen to "my pore little boys" against the Rambling Wreck, said he expected to heed the advice and use the medicine as instructed.

Vanderbilt's News Weekly Takes $10,000 Maryland Futurity

AT LAUREL.

DEAR FOLKS:

The horses have a lot of people walking around in a fog at times. But there's a couple of fellows here who carry their own fog around with them. They are Nick Di Natale and Tom McGee, a couple of ex-service men who pooled their resources after the war and went in business. They have a system for "fogging" of stable areas at race tracks and are doing an excellent business. Many tracks are hiring them—Laurel and Pimlico are the latest—to prevent the possible appearance of dreaded swamp fever as well as to protect the expensive thoroughbreds from various forms of insect nuisances. Jockeys M. N. Gonzales, R. J. Martin and Don Padgett went to Garden State for a stake race and will be here for the Thursday program. Apprentice, Leon Buttler, the most promising of the youngsters here, will ride High Trend for S. Greenfield in the Maryland Handicap. Harry Webb, who hasn't missed a day at the races in years, was not here yesterday due to illness. He is my No. 1 critic and I like him. Hope to see him on the rail real soon. —BILL.

Mark Up, Kashmir Run Second, Third

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 8.—Streaking through the stretch under a steadying hold by Jockey Ruperto Donoso, News Weekly did the expected today and won the $10,000 Added Maryland Futurity.

The 2-year-old colt was the third Futurity winner for Alfred G. Vanderbilt and the son of the 1940 winner, New World. The Vanderbilt colors also were successful in the same race aboard Speed to Spare in 1935.

News Weekly crossed the finish line the best part of five lengths in advance of the closest opposition, the Christiana Stables' Mark Up. In third position came Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Kashmir in the field of eight going the usual 6 furlongs.

A crowd of 12,000 made the chestnut colt an odds-on favorite and he paid a $2.60 mutuel after stepping the three-quarters in 1:12 3/5, only one fifth over the best mark for the race set by Nathaniel last year.

Donoso Down From New York

Jockey Donoso, who came here from New York for the race, rode confidently. He did not hurry the colt as Mark Up and Happy Pappy did most of the front running. When he asked News Weekly for speed, it was there in gobs, for the youngster came through on the inside boldly to take command. Through the stretch it was simply a matter of how great would be his winning margin.

Mark Up, with Jockey Willie Saunders aboard raced Happy Pappy into defeat early and held on gamely to be the beaten-off second, Kashmir, an entrymate of Happy Pappy, closed with good energy to take the show award.

The victory was the fourth for News Weekly in 15 tries this year and sent his earnings to the $20,000 mark.

Whirl Some Triumphs

The Careful, the day's secondary feature, brought victory to the Calumet Farm's fine filly Whirl Some. However, the army of backers of the daughter of Whirlaway had some anxious moments.

Jockey A. Loturco, who rode H. A. Grant's Fleet Boss into second money, made a foul claim against the winner, maintaining Whirl Some crowded his mount. However, the stewards failed to agree and the "Official" was lighted.

Whirlsome paid $3 and was clocked in 1:12 4/5.

Walter Haight Wins

A nag named Walter Haight (not on a diet) came from behind with a rush to win in the first race and stage the setting for a $30.80 pay-off on the daily double. Racing in the colors of Stanley Greene, jr. and probably shocked by the fact he was the favorite, the 8-year-old came into the wire ahead of J. Gross' Alpine Boy and J. F. Adams' Wesley A. to pay an individual mutuel of $5.80.

The finishing touches were put on the twin wager by Mrs. H. J. Mohr's Why Cry, an aptly-named daughter of War Hero and Broken Heart. This 3-year-old had the Flamingo Farm's Syphon and S. M. Follin's In Debt closest to her at the end of the six furlongs.

(Note to sports desk:)

Duke Takes Spotlight Against Twice-Beaten Navy Saturday

Phelps' Kids Honor Jackson With Parade

Stonewall Jackson, District welterweight, who launches his local career as a headliner Monday night at Turner's Arena in a 10-rounder against Joe DiMartino of Bridgeport, Conn., will be honored today with a parade along U st. between 5 and 6 p. m.

Stonewall will ride a brown horse from 15th and U to 7th and U, followed by more than 100 of his loyal supporters from Phelps Vocational High School, where he attends. Banners and placards and appropriate music will enliven his parade.

Jackson has won 18 of his 20 professional fights, and is heralded by his schoolmates as the greatest all-around athlete in Phelps' history. He is a member of the tumbling team and is chief cheerleader.

In DiMartino, he meets the man who knocked out former Welterweight Champion Marty Servo last winter in the bout that convinced Marty to hang up his gloves. Sonewall will be underdog despite his recent victory in Baltimore over Jimmy Collins.

Blue Devils After Third Win of Year

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—For one reason or another the Blue Devils of Duke have been taking a back seat compared with the one their neighboring North Carolina gridders have had.

But this week it's a different story as the Dukes get ready to move another step closer to their prewar heights when they face Navy.

The Tar Heels held the spotlight until some time last Saturday afternoon when Texas was winding up a 34-0 triumph against the con-Devils were putting the finishing touches on a 19-7 victory over the Tennessee Vols. It may have been just after the completion of thise games that Duke eased into the center of the stage and the North Carolinians dropped back to the chrous row for at least this one show.

Middies Are Unimpressive

Should the Blue Devils make the Midshipmen their third victims of the season, they'll merely b eaccomplishing a chore that has been routine since September of 1946. Navy won its opening game last season but has been losing steadily since. Their defeats this year include one by California and another by Columbia.

Unimpressive as that may be, the Duke Blue Devils will still be considered in an even more favorable light than they are right now if they take over the Navy.

One reason for that is Navy Coach Tom Hamilton's statement to the effect that he sincerely believes "we have a good football team and that we'll get started. We're better than last year." And another reason is that three straight victories make practically any ball club look good.

Eight Dukes Sidelined

In preparation for seeking that third win, the Dukes yesterday took a look at the Middies' T formation plays and also polished up their own offense. Eight Dukes, including Tackle Al Derogatis and Captain Ben Cittading watched from the sidelines as the squads' injured members.

Yesterday's practices were much the same throughout the conference as the team got ready for games that range from setups to the kind that make coaches shudder.

Furman Polishes T

The Furman squad, idle last week, finished their rough work yesterday and will spend the rest of this week polishing their T formation attack, according to Coach Bob Smith's schedule.

After watching pictures of the game with Davidson, the Wolfpack of North Carolina State moved ooo doors to correct the errors evident in that tilt. Coach Beattie Feathers has declared today's workout and the rest of those for the week "secret" with the public barred.

Wake Forest gridders drilled on defense against North Carolina plays which the Tar Heels were polishing in their practice session.

The Washington and Lee Generals didn't have the benefit of moving pictures, but their mistakes were made evident by the entire coaching staff which scheduled defensive drills with emphasis on tackling.

Cheered by the return of Quarterback Bobby Thomason, the VMI Keydets were at work on defensive assignments against the plays of Georgia Tech, their next foe.

Tribe Won, 49-0, Last Year

Experienced William & Mary Plots Repeat Win Over V.P.I.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Once again this week, Virginia Tech gets one half of the top billing in a major game within the Old Dominion, and as usual the pregame estimates of what the Gobblers may or may not do are varied.

To many the question concerning Tech's fate against William and Mary hinges on whether or not the Techmen are "up" for the game. To others, Tech being "up" won't make much difference and they figure the Gobblers to go down before the rampaging Indians much as they did last year to the tune of of 41-0 pasting.

Tech Coach Jimmy Kitts sets some store by the fact that enraged Gobblers can accomplish more than is expected. Texas Jimmy drawls that, "we'll definitely be the underdog and when Tech is on the short end of the odds, you never can tell what will happen."

A good many things have happened in the past, one of them was Tech's 14-14 deadlock with North Carolina last year and another was Tech's 18-18 tie with a powerful Kentucky team in 1942.

p9refun

Tribe Has Vet Team

Those who are inclined to answer the question of whether or not the Gobblers will be "up," with "so what?" have some basis for their opinion in the way William and Mary stacks up this season as compared with last year.

Since the Indians have everybody who was on hand to fashion the Tech debacle last year, and a few more besides, VPI is manned with one or two exceptions by the same crew. There ies some reason to suspect that the "what" school is working on plain logic.

In beating Davidson and The Citadel to slip into the top rung of the Southern Conference ladder, the Tribe set some new records for its potent single-wing effect. The records show they gained a total of 540 yards through the air and on the ground against The Citadel, surpassing last year's single game mark of 524 yards set against VMI.

Their game average in offensive yardage is a towering 419, enough to bring 77 points in the two games played.

Indians Get First Test

Should the Gobblers, "up" or not, make a game of the affair booked in the Richmond Stadium Saturday, they will be giving the Indians their first real test and going a long way towards erasing the blot of last week's 41-7 drubbing at the hands of Virginia.

Meanwhile, the Old Dominion squads are slated to get their usual dose of scrimmaging. For some the rough work started yesterday and will continue through tomorrow, and for others it will merely be the one hard shot this afternoon.

Bobby Thomason and Mike Boyda, the injured quarterbacks of VMI and Washington and Lee respectively, are practically back in harness with Thomason already taking part in the Keydet drills and Boyda due to be back in shape by game time Saturday.

Another injured back, Ralph Beard, may be able to go into action Saturday, but Gobbler coaches fear that he may not be in condition after over two weeks of sideline maneuvers resulting from a leg injury.

Southeast Plays Mohawks Sunday

The Southeast Boys Club will attempt to strengthen its hold on first place in the Eastern Division of the Metropolitan Football League's 160-pound class when the team plays the Maryland Mohawks at Fairlawn field No. 1 Sunday at 2 p. m.

Riverside Rollers, leading the Western Division 160-pounders, clash with the Shamrocks on the East Elipse. Arrow Linen Supply meets the Anacostia Lions at Fairlawn No. 3 and the Brookland-Woodridge Merchants meet the Southwest Merchants at Hoover Playground, Second and N sts. nw. in other 160-pound games scheduled. Merrick Boys Club drew a bye.

Centralizing Urged For Farm Programs

Anderson Asks Congress to Provide Assistant to Integrate Work of Agencies

By The Associated Press

A plan to centralize farm programs at "grass roots" levels through county committees elected by the farmers was proposed yesterday by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson.

He suggested Congress provide for a new Assistant Secretary of Agriculture with responsibility "for integrating the work of the departmental agencies carried out in the counties."

The recommendations were made to a joint session of House and Senate Agriculture committees as the final point in the Administration's program for long-range agricultural policy on which the committees are at work.

The overall Administration policy statement includes proposals for "modernizing" the parity formula on which price supports for farm commodities are based, and a national policy for maintaining high food consumption.

(Present parity is a price calculated to give farmers purchasing power equal to some previous favorable period for agriculture, usually 1909-1914. The department said that its proposed revisions would reshuffle various commodities but the average of parity would remain about the same.

Most committeemen withheld comment on the overall policy statement pending a tour of the country beginning Saturday on which farmers will be asked to give their ideas.

Anderson also told the committees that the "Department of Agriculture is not trying to break the grain market."

Senator Thomas (D., Okla.) had asked how the Department "reconciles its attempt to break the market" with its statement that per capita farm income still is only about one-half the income of people in the cities.

On the contrary, Anderson said, grain exchange spokesmen have accused the Government of responsibility for high grain prices because of its purchases for foreign shipment.

Thomas asked Anderson to state what he thought the wheat price should be.

"I think," the Secretary said, "that when we get over $3 wheat we are lending ourselves to a situation where we can have boom and bust."

He said he does not exactly know what the price should be but added "I se no danger in $2.50 wheat. I do se danger if prices go on a rampage in this country."

Thomas said "I am not afraid of the present price level" and said that in his opinion prices will go 10 to 15 per cent higher.

Anderson agreed that the general price level probably will stay relatively high for a long time.

In urging consolidation and coordination of farm program activities, Anderson submitted recommendations of his policy and program committee which call for:

1. Establishment of a Department of Agriculture farmer-elected committee in each county.

2. Consolidation of housing of all agricultural agencies in the county.

3. Establishment of a U. S. D. A. State committee in each State.

4. Consolidation of the soil conservation service program and the agricultural conservation program into one conservation program and agency.

5. Provision for an Assistant Secretary of Agriculture to whom the Secretary could assign responsibility for the State and county U. S. D. A.

"Activities Should be Focused"

"It seems to me perfectly plain," Anderson said, "that agricultural activities should be brought to a focus at one point in every county.

"For example, it is only good sense to centralize within the county responsibility for the development of a county conservation plan, and approval of the requests of soil conservation districts for assistance."

Hawley Says He'll Stay on If 'Essential'

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, Veterans' Administration medical director, yesterday confirmed reports that he'd like to retire.

At the same time, however, he declared he had every intention of staying on the job so long as he felt it "essential" to the continuance of VA's revolutionary medical program.

In any case, Dr. Hawley said, he would work for Gen. Omar N. Bradley, administrator of veterans' affairs, "as long as he wants me." General Bradley called in General Hawley to be his medical lieutenant as his first appointment on taking charge of VA two years ago.

"It's always been known I've no intention of staying here indefinitely," said the wartime chief surgeon of the European theater. "I think a new administrator should pick his own medical director."

Dr. Hawley pointed out that General Bradley's tenure as VA boss was "uncertain". The reference was to unofficial reports that Bradley is to succeed Gen. "Ike" Eisenhower as chief of staff of the Army, when the latter assumes the presidency of Columbia University the first of the year.

The VA chief, whose accomplishments with the VA veterans care program has won the acclaim of organized medicine, refusal to comment on reports that he might succeed General Bradley as administrator. Dr. Hawley has stated he does not want the VA directorship, but a boom to have the White House "draft" Hawley has been started by the proponents of VA's medical program.

Dr. Hawley was optimistic about the future of the VA medical program, originally opposed by strong factions of organized medicine, veterans organizations, and Congress.

"If the program can be held together for another year," Hawley predicted, "the chances are good that the program will be continued no matter who runs VA or its medical system. By that time we'll have so many satisfied customers among the veteran-patients, that any effort to change the program radically will be resisted by the veterans themselves."

There's been a decrease of political pressure and an increase of understanding and support for the program by members of Congress, General Hawley said.

Ed Pawley Is Reported In Line for Royall's Job

New Appointment May Be to Groom Army Secretary If Present One Quits

By Jerry Kluttz

Kluttz

SPECULATION: There's plenty of it in top Army circles at the Pentagon over the future of Edwin Pauley, a special assistant to Army Secretary Kenneth Royall.

The generally accepted theory is this — that Pauley was put into his new job by the President to learn the Army's problems and that he will be promoted to Secretary of the Army if and when Royall resigns. Royall has considered resigning early next year to run for Governor of North Carolina.

On this one point there is absolutely no doubt—that the elevation of Pauley to the Army's No. 1 civilian job has been discussed by top Administration strategists. This question always pops up — can Pauley be confirmed by the Senate? It's recalled that the President withdrew Pauley's nomination for Navy Undersecretary some months ago to end a knockdown fight.

Many Army people fear the nomination of Pauley as Army Secretary would cause another furious political fight, and that the Army would suffer for it.

MARITIME: Vice Admiral W. W. Smith, chairman of the Maritime Commission, yesterday collapsed while he was defending his agency's 1949 budget at the Budget Bureau. He's in the Naval Hospital.

TREASURY: Edward F. Kenney is the new chief chemist of the Customs laboratory in New York. He formerly was chief of its laboratory here.

LOYALTY: Because some of its confidential loyalty files were given to members of Congress, you can look for the Civil Service Commission to take these steps:

1. To call in an ace investigator from one of his regions to make an inquiry into the whole affair.

2. To shake up the staff handling the files and either to fire or to sidetrack any employe it has good reason to believe caused the "leak," and,

3. To take steps to provide greater security of the files here and in its regional offices.

IN A FEW second-floor offices in the old State Building there is more drive and enthusiasm than has been shown in any Federal agency here since the early days of OPA and WPB. The offices are those of Charles Luckman, chairman of the Citizens Food Committee, and his staff.

Luckman and his staff are working all hours of the day and night. They average no more than four hours of sleep each night. Executives who are accustomed to suites of offices are working at crowded desks without phones and secretaries. Luckman and his staff worked out a save-food promotion program in three days that would have ordinarily taken two months.

The Luckman committee has no Federal funds. A few people have been borrowed from other Government agencies. Much of the cost to date has been paid either by Luckman or by the companies and departments his people are associated with.

"No one has asked how much or when we'll be paid, if ever," a Luckman aide said yesterday. "But we hope that problem can be solved when we get the food conservation program under way. That program comes first—minor details later," he added.

Luckman has set up what he calls a "kitchen cabinet" to advise him on problems and procedures. Members are:

James Barnett of Chicago, general manager of the Pepsodent Co.; David Noyes, former WPB official; Austin Fisher of the labor relations firm by that name; Abe Fortas, former Interior official, who is now in private law practice here; James Barnes, former Illinois Congressman and White House secretary, who practices law here, and Michael Roche, director of advertising for Lever Bros., Luckman's firm.

Also on Luckman's staff are: Bruce Catton and Al Lubin, information specialists; his office manager is Nathan Bartlett, secretary of Commerce's Business Advisory Committee; Katherine Fisher, the food editor of Good Housekeeping magazine, and Thomas Gonser, vice president of Northwestern University. Consumer and industrial representatives will be added shortly.

The staff will be kept to a minimum. Its objective is to persuade the American people to save 100 million bushels of grain to help feed the western European countries. The agency will fold up quickly once that goal is reached.

PERSONAL: My Federal Diary of the Air is tonight and every Thursday night at 6:30 over WRC instead of on Saturdays.

Taking a Healthy Sip for a Penny

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

GOOD HABIT—Children at the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw., enjoy milk and graham crackers during their morning recess period. The school is one of 85 in the city participating in the penny milk program. For a half pint of milk a child pays a penny. The Federal Government under the National School Lunch Act pays 2 cents and the District the remainder. The program encourages children to get into the milk drinking habit. The children are (front, from left): Jackie Waxler, 5; Shirley Ann Kincheloe, 7, and Nancy Taddeo, 7; and (rear, from left) Anna Ashby, 7; Saundra Ogle, 7, and Morris Waxler, 10. Malnutrition Noted at Day Care Centers

15% of Children Enrolled Are Affected, D. C. Board Reports

Evidence of "rather serious malnutrition" has been found among children attending child day-care centers, the Board of Public Welfare revealed yesterday.

Approximately 15 per cent of the 210 children enrolled at the day-care centers show evidence of "malnutrition or potential malnutrition," welfare department officials said.

Most of the children sent to the centers after their families were cut from relief rolls in recent economy moves are included in this group, they revealed.

"These children have abnormal appetites," said Mrs. Nancy Ratcliff, nutritioned for the day care centers. "They eat not only much more than the other children in their groups, but eat as if they were really hungry. Their food consumption will be markedly higher than that of the others."

The Welfare Board, in a prepared statement, said many of the children previously "were cared for at home by their mothers."

"Now," said the board, "under the new regulations for public assistance, if the father or supporting relative is employed full time at any salary or part time earning as much as $1200 the family can no longer be kept on the rolls, although income is not providing basic budget needs."

In many cases, a Welfare Department official said, mothers have been forced to seek jobs to augment the family income and have not sent their children to the day care centers.

He Hates Cops

Dog Needs Psychiatrist, Owner Says

His mistress hopes a good psychiatrist can cure Shep of his dislike for policemen and police cars.

"He has a psychiatric maladjustment and needs psychiatric help," Mrs. H. C. Kilpatrick of 4120 42d st. nw. told Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott yesterday.

Shep is a dog, part shepherd and part collie. Mrs. Kilpatrick was in court yesterday charged with keeping an unleashed dog. The charge was made by Police Corpl. B. N. Bradshaw of the Eighth Precinct.

"This dog has been considerable bother to me," said Bradshaw accusingly.

He testified that every time he came in the block, the dog would chase him around the block. One day he collared Shep and took him back to his mistress.

"She told me she was going to take him to a psychiatrist," Bradshaw recalled.

Mrs. Kilpatrick testified that her dog is "beloved by everyone in the neighborhood" but that he has an aversion to policemen and police cars. She said Shep has "progressed materially" since she got him.

"He used to chase every car that came along," she said. "Now he only chases police cars."

Mrs. Kilpatrick said she had conferred several times with the Animal Rescue League to see if a psychiatrist couldn't make Shep less of a "cop-baiter."

Judge Scott told Mrs. Kilpatrick that this being the first offense he would take her personal bond that there would be no further trouble.

Nor was this Judge Scott's only animal case of the day. Also appearing before him was Mrs. Addie Striker, who operates a rooming house at 714 Mount Vernon pl. nw. The Health Department had complained of unhealthy conditions in her house because of her pets—three dogs and about 20 cats.

Baby's Beer Question Up To ABC Board

Can Infant Be Party To Contract to Buy? Decision Due Tuesday

Whether a 27-month-old girl can enter into a contract to get a baby-sized beer was a question put before the District ABC board yesterday.

On the board's decision—due next Tuesday—rests the innocence or gilt of a Washington restaurateur and his wife on a charge of "sale or delivery" of beer to a baby.

Michael J. Kelly, owner of Kelly's Restaurant, 1801 L st. nw., and his wife, Annie, appeared before the board yesterday to answer charges that Mrs. Kelly served two beers, mama and papa-sized to the child's parents and a shot-glass full to the baby on August 6.

The parents, Nick and Mary Boudoulos, and the baby, Patricia Ann, could not be located for the hearing yesterday, police said.

Police Pvt. Howard Dudley, Third Precinct, told the board he saw Mrs. Kelly serve the two-and-a-fraction beers. He also said that when he took the glass away from in front of the baby, Mrs. Boudoulos told him Patricia preferred beer to soda pop.

Mrs. Kelly said there was a high cuff on Mrs. Boudoulos' beer and she put the excess foam in a whiskey glass for the child to play with; later brought the baby a soft drink when it began to cry.

Kelly's attorney, Max Tendler, threw the legal question into the board's lap when he entered a motion to dismiss the case on grounds that delivery or sale of a beer involves two people and that a 27-month-old child was not able to enter into such a contract.

That is what the board took under advisement until Tuesday.

Kew Gardens

Apartment Rent Hearing Reopened

District Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson yesterday reopened hearings on a proposed 12 per cent rent hike for Kew Gardens Apartments, 2700 Q st. nw.

Roevmar Realty Corp., owner of the 138-unit building, originally appealed for an increase in July. After hearings, Tyson ruled that evidence was conflicting and incomplete, and granted a 3 per cent increase on the basis of tax and water boosts on 54 apartments.

Under the new hearing, the previously granted increase is no longer effective.

At yesterday's hearing Herman Koran, accountant, presented figures to show that the company has spent $17,065 on improvements since 1941. These included a hot water heating system and oil burner.

A group of residents of the apartment protested the increase. They said that the management had been "extremely neglectful in their up-keep of the property." They charged that heating was inadequate, a children's playground had been locked up, and that proper ventilation was not provided.

William T. Davies, a resident of the apartment for the past six years, told Tyson he believed most of the tenants would "go along" with the increase, if the board could persuade the management to "meet the tenants half way" in their demands for improvements.

A decision in the case will be rendered after Tyson has studied the new evidence.

Battle Over D. C. Budget Opens Today

Economy Plea Voiced By Taxpayers' Head As Hearings Begin on 114 Million Program

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Public hearings on the District budget for 1949 will open today with the stage set for sharp controversy among Washington groups.

The three District Comissioners will conduct the hearings, starting at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building. Spokesmen for 26 Washington groups are scheduled to testify.

The hearings will mark the close of the first round of annual budget preparation. Basis for the discussion is the 144-million-dollars pending program proposed by heads of city agencies. The second round will come when the Commissioners trim the agency estimates into proposed expenditures that can be financed out of expected revenue, and send their own program to the Budget Bureau for inclusion in the President's annual budget message to Congress.

Outline of the main argument for today's hearing was drawn yesterday in an economy call issued by Rufus S. Lusk, as president of the Washington Taxpayers Association.

Lusk appealed to business and civic groups to join in warding off need for higher property taxes in the 1949 fiscal year.

Said Lusk:

"The forces advocating the spending of money are well-organized, vocal and work hard," Lusk said. "They know just what projects they want and they know how to go about asking for them. There are 50 groups that seek the spending of tax money (that is, your money) to one that may advocate economy.

"On the spending side are the local unions, all of the left-wing organizations such as the League of Women Shoppers, and no end of do-good outfits such as the Council of Social Agencies and the Washington Housing Association."

In reply to Lusk, Mrs. Kathleen R. Clift, president of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, said:

"As a group of women who are all taxpayers and many of whom are property owners, the League of Women Shoppers is proud of its record in fighting for slum clearance, adequate housing, and equitable taxation.

"The cost of slums, of overcrowding, and of taxes that bear heavily on those least able to pay is crime, delinquency, disease, undernourishment and social unrest.

"This is a cost we are unwilling to pay. Spending of dollars raised by taxes based on ability to pay to raise the American standard of living is an obligation we are anxious to see fulfilled."

Miss Josephone S. Starr, secretary of the family and child welfare division of the Council of Social Agencies, said there was no question that Lusk was right in suggesting that her organization believed the city should spend more for welfare.

"There is no doubt that this year's appropriation for public welfare is thoroughly inadequate," said Miss Starr. "People have been cut off relief, and relief continues to be inadequate. The board hoped to bring grants into line with the food costs of May, 1946, but they have had to stay at the levels of August, 1942.

"There are active TB cases on the rolls, and there is no chance now to give them special diets. It's a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy to handle tubercular cases like that."

In addition to 17 witnesses listed for today's hearing, the following are to testify: Charles J. Bauer, speaking for Lusk as representative of the Washington Building Owners and Managers Association and the Washington Taxpayers League; Mary H. Pels, Family Service Association; Nels C. Benson and Harry C. Grove, Connecticut Avenue Citizens' Association.

$25,325 Jewel Loss At Hotel Reported

Police Think Woman Cosmetic Firm Owner Misplaced Valuables

MERLE NORMAN
Cosmetiste "loses" jewels

A California woman who ran a home cosmetics business into a million-dollar industry yesterday reported loss of $25,325 in jewelry from her room in the Mayflower Hotel.

Complaint was registered by Miss Merle Norman of Santa Monica, Calif., owner of the Norman Cosmetics Co., who was in Washington on a tour of retail outlets handling her products.

Police were without a clew, and suggested the jewelry, including a $15,000 platinum lapel pin, may have been misplaced in packing. Miss Norman listed the valuables as:

A gold lapel brooch with diamonds and rubies valued at $8500; platinum earrings, $1500, and a short string of pearls, $325.

Miss Norman, accompanied by her companion-maid, Ruth Cleveland, arrived in Washington Saturday, went to New York Tuesday, and returned to the Mayflower about midnight that day.

Detective Sergt. S. T. Creech said the jewels might have been elsewhere than in their usual place in a brief case and possibly would be found later.

Miss Norman checked out of the hotel yesterday morning for Mexico City. She said the jewelry was insured.

Miss Norman's cosmetic business began with a salve she developed when working for a Los Angeles chemical plant. She found it made a foundation for cosmetics. From 1931, the business was built into a complete line of cosmetics.

Police also received a report yesterday of the theft of cash, a wrist watch and a ring from Illinois Jacquet, orchestra leader. Jacquet said his room at the Dunbar House, 2015 15th st. nw., was entered when he was asleep early yesterday, and that a $600 watch, a $200 ring and $150 in cash were taken.

'Friend' Went Calling On Girl Friend and Never Came Back

Holding a set of burglar tools for a friend while he goes calling on his girl friend is risky business. It can get you in trouble, or even in jail.

Alton A. Farnsworth, 36, 1211 Vermont ave. nw., learned this yesterday when he and John H. Naef, 32, 1415 N st. nw. were arraigned before Municipal Judge Armond Scot on charges of vagrancy.

Naef was arrested Tuesday at about 9 p. m. by Pvt. Niilo Niemienen of the Thirteenth Precinct. The policeman became suspicious when he observed Naef standing in the doorway of the Kit-Mar Restaurant at 14th and Florida ave. nw. signaling to somebody with a pencil-sized flashlight.

At the station it was found that Naef was carrying a crowbar and a pair of rubber gloves.

Niemienen returned to his beat. At 14th and Florida ave. he spotted Farnsworth. He remembered that Farnsworth had been there when he arrested Naef, so he questioned him. The policeman wasn't satisfied with the answers so he took Farnsworth to the station.

Search is Revealing

A search revealed that Farnsworth was carrying a sledge hammer (the handle of which was stuffed down his trousers leg, a center punch, a pair of rubber gloves and a newspaper clipping concerning Tommy English, recently jailed safecracker.

In court yesterday Farnsworth said he met a friend named "Lee" at Thomas Circle Tuesday night. He said "Lee" told him he was going to visit his girl friend at 14th and Belmont sts. nw. and would Farnsworth please hold his tools for a while? Farnsworth didn't know where "Lee" might be now.

"Isn't this your record?" asked Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Kneipp, waving a burglary record dating back to 1935 in front of Farnsworth's eyes.

"Yes," said Farnsworth meekly.

Gets 90 Days

"Yes," said Farnsworth again.

Judge Scott gave Farnsworth a straight jail sentence of 90 days. In addition he fined him $300 and said if he didn't pay the fine he could spend the remainder of 1947 behind bars. He fined Naef $100 or 30 days and gave him this reminder:

"You ought to be thankful you were arrested on a vagrancy charge before you got into serious trouble. You should thank the officer."

Man Held in Va. Extortion Plot

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Charles W. Brown, special agent in charge of the Richmond office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, today announced the arrest at Roanoke, Va., of a man giving the name of Jack Randall Mixon on charges of seeking to extort $2000 from B. V. Reid, of Rocky Mount, Va.

Brown said Mixon gave FBI agents a signed statement admitting that he wrote extortion letters received by Reid which threatened harm to his wife and children unless the money was paid according to directions.

The FBI agent said Mixon also stated he was a parolee from the New Mexico State Penitentiary, being paroled December 24, 1946, while serving a life term for murder, committed in 1938.

Service Medals on Way

Baltimore, Oct. 8 (AP).—The Maryland military district and the Army recruiting service today started distributing World War II Victory Medals and American Defense Medals to veterans of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

Supreme Court Of Virginia Honors Late Justice

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Continuing its session today, the State Supreme Court of Appeals paid final tribute to the late Justice George L. Browning, heard argument on several cases and granted appeals in six cases, refusing to hear five others.

Governor Tuck, members of the State's judiciary on both Federal and State benches and other prominent Virginians gathered in a crowded courtroom to join in memorial services for the Justice who died August 26 after 17 years on the Supreme Court bench.

In response to statements from several of Justice Browning's friends, Justice C. Vernon Spratley said of his former associate:

"He loved the law, its reason and its philosophy.

"He judged justly."

After the memorial service the court heard several cases, including the appeal of Leonard E. Davis, former auxiliary police officer of Richmond, who was sentenced to seven years on a charge of raping a 32-year-old Negress.

A second police officer, Carl R. Burleson, was convicted on the same charge in Hustings Court, but his disappearance had left his case unsettled.

Royall Inspects Buggs Island Dam On Roanoke River

Buggs Island, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall said today the War Department was "pushing" the multi-purpose Buggs Island flood control and power dam on the Roanoke River, and that it was "hoped" Congress would continue appropriating funds to keep construction moving fast.

But, he added, "those things are hard to predict."

Arriving for an official inspection of the 57-million-dollar project, Royall asked the people of Virginia and North Carolina to give their "full support and enthusiasm" to the dam.

"A good measure" of its success, he said, depends upon the amount of help and support given to it by the public.

"What we need," he declared, "is the maximum realization of our natural resources . . . and this project promises to do that."

Police Briefing 12 Employes in New Complaint Room

The Wa

AT WORK IN THE NEW CENTRAL COMPLAINT ROOM OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT

Twelve employes were added to the Metropolitan Police Department rolls yesterday to revise the statistical reporting setup in the department and complete other preliminaries incident to the new bureau.

Capt. John J. Agnew, who heads the bureau, said that 13 more employes would be assigned to his agency early next week. The Central Complaint Room, which will be located on the fourth floor of the Municipal Center, is expected to be in operation in about two months.

The clerk-typists are now located in the gymnasium on the sixth floor. In addition to Captain Agnew, Inspector Floyd Truscott and Pvt. Charles E. Riley are instructing them.

The District Commissioners authorized the Central Complaint Room after the Federal Bureau of Investigation and The Washington Post showed that police here were "pocketing" complaints of crime instead of reporting them.

Area News in Brief

Judge Releases Drunk, Battered by Officer

Henry T. Etter, 38, of 117 11th st. se., appeared before Municipal Court Judge Armand Scott with his head swathed in bandages. An assistant district attorney said the injuries were the result of Etter's attack on a policemen who brought him a drink of water.

The district attorney said the policeman was forced to use his blackjack to subdue the prisoner.

Said Judge Scott:

"This is the eighth time this year you've been brought into court. However, I am not going to put a man away who has been beaten like that."

Etter was freed on personal bond, and his promise not to appear in court on drunk charges.

Taxpayers Protest

The first of a series of public hearings held by the Maryland Tax Commission for Montgomery County property owners protesting recent assessment increases was held yesterday in Rockville.

More than 20 Bethesda and Silver Spring commercial property owners appeared yesterday. Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr., representing several of the property owners, contended the assessments are invalid. He said assessment procedure used was different than that required by law.

Liquor Store Poll Set

Residents of Colmar Manor (Md.) will be polled in an unofficially referendum on the desirability of admitting additional liquor establishments, Mayor John N. Tovastad said yesterday.

Outcome of the poll will guide the town council, which already has appeared before the Prince Georges County liquor board to oppose issuing of additional licenses, Torvasted said. Although the council contends the 18 existing stores are "sufficient," he added, it seeks to determine the will of the public before taking further steps.

Husband Can't 'Rob' Wife

A husband can't steal from his wife, at least in the eyes of the law, Magistrate Harry Snyder said yesterday at Hagerstown, Md., in dismissing a larceny charge against Herbert V. Hull, 40. Mrs. Elman N. Hull accused her husband of taking her silverware and selling it.

Librarians Convene Today

Librarians from Maryland, the District of Columbia, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and West Virginia convene in Baltimore today for a three-day regional conference.

Their program is built around adult education projects—"we seek to educate the people who here and now have to function in the world, not the next generation".

Forget Something?

These books, a lady's pocketbook with a man's identification card, a foot locker, a black crepe dress and a miscellaneous assortment of hats, gloves and other items are in the Diamond Cab Co. lost and found department, 1735 14th st. nw., it was reported yesterday.

$5800 Wages Found Due

The District Minimum Wage Board yesterday reported that it found a total of $5800 due to 181 women and minors during the quarter ended September 30.

Underpayment by classifications was: Public housekeepers, $4061; retail trade employes, $595; laundries, $1063; beauty parlors, $71; office workers, $10.

The board noted no cases of underpayment in manufacturing trades. Minimum wages vary from $14.50 in some classifications to $25 a week in others. The lower figure is now being revised by the board.

Fines totaling $400 were obtained in eight court cases during the quarter, the board reported.

Fined in Drunk Boating

John S. Wolf, 18, of 3206 Wisconsin ave. nw., was found guilty by Judge George Neilson in Municipal Court yesterday of operating a speedboat while intoxicated. Wolf paid a $100 fine in preference to a 60-day sentence.

Harbor police arrested Wolf August 18 following a chase when the 30-foot boat he was operating without lights ran aground in the Potomac.

Gives DDT Findings

A DDT spray concentration of one pound an acre will kill fish and five pounds an acre will kill birds and small mammals, J. P. Linduska, Fish and Wildlife Service game biologist, said yesterday.

Held on New Charge

A man who has been free on $5000 bond on a safe-cracking charge yesterday was held on $2500 bond for robbery.

The defendent was listed as Charles E. Rockinberg, 21, of 4506 Lily Pond dr. ne., who is charged with robbery of Robert Cole, 25, of 6129 Western ave. nw.

Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey ordered Rockinberg held on bond.

D. C. Has Flower Famine

Jack Frost put in some overtime work a few weeks ago, and District florists yesterday reported a flower shortage so critical it was the "worst in memory."

Not only are flowers hard to find, but when you do locate them they are selling at 200 per cent above the usual autumn prices.

Almost unavailable, the florists said, are chrysanthemums, dahlias and gladioli. Large chrysanthemums are being wholesaled at $12 to $18 a dozen, against usual fall prices of $6 to $12.

Tickling Victim Freed

William H. Hawkins, 44, a Government Printing Office employe, was found not guilty of charges of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Hawkins was accused of stabbing John C. Estes, a coworker, with a pair of dividers because he thought Estes was one of a group who tickled him.

Clothing Man Urges Labor To Peg Pay

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Ispael November of the Friedman-Marks Clothing Co., testifying before the congressional subcommittee on the Economic Report here today, urged that labor not ask for any wage increases during the coming year in the interests of keeping prices down, but his suggestion was refuffed by a committee member.

Replying to November's assertion that labor could "put itself in a strong position" by not asking for wage increases this year, Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.) remarked that the costs were going up for labor and said, "unfortunately, everybody says 'let George do it,' let labor do it."

November blamed "racketeers" for some of the increased costs in men's clothing, saying that they were able to get trimmings and are taking advantage of that ability.

Trimmings, he explained, are among the costlier items in the manufacture of men's clothing. He said they should cost 67 cents but are now priced at $2.

He said his company, because of increased volume, has been able to cut its gross markup by 10 per cent but then added that retailers who were marking up 35 to 38 per cent under the OPA are now marking up 40 to 45 per cent.

Another witness before the subcommittee this afternoon, Wade C. McCargo, president of the H. V. Baldwin & Co. Department Store here, declared that the one thing that would help more than anything else to ease the burden now would be a reduction in Government spending coupled with a tax reduction.

He noted in his testimony a great improvement in the quality of most lines during the past year, citing women's pocketbooks and men's broadcloth shorts as two typical items.

Md. Airport Award Put Before Court

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8 (AP).—An Anne Arundel County jury ward of $81,700 for a 135-acre tract condemned by Baltimore City for its municipal airport was called into question formally today in the County Court.

Judge William J. McWilliams, after hearing arguments on a motion for a new trial sought by the city, said he would take the matter under consideration.

Arguing for the city, Hamilton O'Dunne, assistant city solicitor, said the court had the right and the duty to set aside the verdict "if not satisfied" with it.

In reply, Attorney George B. Woelfel, counsel for the Hammond family who owns the property, said the verdict could be set aside "only if it shocks the conscience of the court."

Last week the jury set the value on the Hammond property in the Friendship Church area.

O'Dunne pointed out that in this case the verdict was unique in a series of similar condemnation suits in that the jury set a higher figure than that of the highest estimating expert called by the property owners.

Charles Pumphrey of Baltimore, a defense witness, had estimated the fair market value of the property with improvements at $80,000. C. E. Hammond, one of the co-owners, had set a value of $92,000 on it.

2 Academy Sailors Held in Assault

Baltimore, Oct. 8 (AP).—Two sailors stationed at the U. S. Naval Academy were ordered held for grand jury action on assault and robbery charges today after a magistrate heard testimony that they attacked a soldier after they left a tavern.

The accused identified themselves as Albertus J. Lughart and Spencer A. Pfleegor, 21. Magistrate Herbert F. Franklin ordered them held in $100 bail after both pleaded innocent.

Laurel Worker Dies

Laurel, Md., Oct. 8 (AP).—Merle Writt, 58, employe of a caterer's concession firm at the Laurel Park race track, died today of a heart attack as he walked to the stands.

Women's Jury Service in Md. Is Challenged

Baltimore, Oct. 8 (AP).—Saying he has nothing against women, an attorney today sought to have women's jury service in Maryland declared unconstitutional.

Paul B. Mules presented his arguments in Criminal Court before Judge Abner J. Sayler. He is attorney for Irvin D. Limper, auto mechanic charged with the holdup of two newspaper carriers. Mules seeks to have the jury panel invalidated because it contains women.

Judge Saylor took the arguments under consideration and said he would give Mules time to read opposition briefs filed by the Women's Bar Association and the Lawyer's Guild.

He did not say when he would have a decision ready, or whether he would allow Mules to reply to the briefs in court.

Last winter, after years of using it as a political football, the General Assembly enacted a law authorizing women to serve on juries, but it exempted 12 of the State's 23 counties. Women were drawn on jury panels in Baltimore City and the 11 other counties for September terms of court and served on juries in Maryland for the first time in history.

Might Void Many Trials

If Mules should win his case, all cases which have been tried with women jurors might be challenged and invalidated.

He contended exemption of 12 counties makes the act a local law. He said because it was written as an amendment to the general law prescribing regulation for jury service it is unconstitutional. You can't, he declared, amend a general law with a local law.

"There is no reasonable basis," he declared, "for approving women jurors in some counties and disqualifying them in others."

No Prohibition Found

He contended the statutes which permit women to practice law are State-wide general laws, and women's jury service should be, too.

Assistant State's Attorney John Weiss argued he had searched the Federal and State Constitutions and found nothing which would prohibit women from serving on juries in some counties and not in others. He declared many other laws are applicable only to parts of the State.

It was pointed out that in some counties, jurors must be at least 25 years old, in others only 21. In some counties they may be as old as 70, in others only 65.

Va. Welfare Asks Doubled Budget Of $20,500,000

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—The State Department of Public Welfare asked Governor Tuck and his budget advisory board today to approve a public welfare program costing nearly $20,500,000 in 1948-50, more than double the 1946-48 appropriations.

Welfare Commissioner Arthur W. James proposed that $10,010,555 come from the State's general fund and the balance from Federal and local funds. The general fund request compares with $5,439,642 appropriated for 1946-48.

James emphasized only small increases are asked in administrative costs. Five new positions were sought, including a supervisor for the field staff, a medical social worker, and a consultant for adult institutions. Virtually the entire $10,900,000 increase in the total budget would go for welfare payments.

The budget would permit old age assistance payments of $21.06 per month instead of the $17.61 paid in July and $54.05 per family in aid to dependent children instead of $39.45.

Manassas to Have 'Labor Saving' Show

Manassas, Va., Oct. 8 (Spl.).—A farm and home "labor-saving show" will be held at the Manassas High School tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., under sponsorship of the Virginia Agricultural Service.

More than 100 exhibits from the Virginia Agricultural Extension Division at Blacksburg will be used in demonstrations of labor-saving equipment and practices, most of which have been developed by the extension service. The exhibit has been planned with the cooperation of Prince William County officials.

In Baltimore Case

Paid $20,000 Back Taxes, Says Lawyer

Baltimore, Oct. 8 (AP).—Attorney Charles T. Leviness testified today he paid the Government $20,000 just before his indictment last summer on a charge of income tax invasion.

Taking the stand in Federal Court, Leviness produced a cancelled check for $20,000 he posted with the Government. He said he had borrowed most of the money from a law partener and his wife's trust fund, adding:

Leviness, former chairman of the Baltimore Board of Liquor License Commissioners, said he had "looked over my 1944 returns and decided there was something wrong with them."

He said he tried to find out what he owed from the Treasury Department, the Justice Department and from United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn, but:

"I got pushed around from one department to another and never got any final figures."

Farm Expert Warns Against Speculation

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8 (AP).—Food exports and industrial income will influence farm prices and, as a result, farm land values, Dr. A. B. Hamilton of the University of Maryland, department of agricultural economics, declared today, speaking to directors of seven national farm loan associations from Maryland, Delaware and Virginia at Carvel Hall. Dr. Hamilton said:

"Government, not speculation, will determine the level of food prices."

The amount of food exported to Europe, the number of industrial workers, and the level of wages will determine how high food prices remain, he said, and farm land values will vary accordingly from their present peak.

Dr. Hamilton predicted a break in farm rea lestate prices, but "not as severe as in 1920." He attributed this to the fact farm mortgage debt is low and nonfarmers probably will hold on to farm land they have acquired.

Western Enrpoean countries asking for aid from this country "recognize that there are two worlds," he asserted, but added he did not believe Russia had the food to help nations outside the Soviet sphere.

At the same time he advised encuraging farmers to pay existing debts, cull low-producing livestock, conserve soil, acquire labor-saving equipment and adopt practices to assure profitable operations over a long period.

Trucker and Farmer Aid Asked on Roads

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—The State Highway Department today called on truckers and farmers to complete all heavy hauling on secondary roads and on lightly surfaced primary roads in the early fall before winter weather weakens roadbeds.

During last year's light winter load limits were not widespread, but in 1945-46 more than 3000 miles of highway were damaged by severe weather and heavy hauling, and load limit restrictions were widespread.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 8 (Spl.)—The Stafford County board of supervisors has voted to withdraw from the Prince William-Fairfax-Stafford Health Department to consolidate with a proposed unit for the Fredericksburg area.

Lane Delays Liquor Case Extradition

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8 (AP). — Governor Lane today continued the extradition case of Sam Gildar of Baltimore, charged with conspiring to violate North Carolina's liquor laws, and called for a formal ruling on technical issues involved.

North Carolina is seeking to try Gildar along with five other defendants on liquor law violations, which Charles T. Hagan, jr., solicitor of the State's twelfth judicial district, said involved 54,000 cases of liquor valued at $1,900,000 wholesale.

Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Buscher heard arguments on the extradition case early today and after he had made his recommendations to the Governor, Lane decided he would hear concluding arguments on both sides.

The Governor asked representatives for North Carolina and attorneys for Gildar to submit briefs involving three points: (1) sufficiency of the warrant under which Gildar is charged, (2) construction of the Maryland statue and (3) its validity.

Hagan contended that under the Maryland uniform extradition statute, North Carolina had only to charge Gildar with intention to violate the law in order that Lane might decide to send him there for trial.

The specific warrant under which Gildar is sought involves 215 cases of whisky. He is charged with conspiracy along with J. A. Thompson, W. M. Hanford, Fred T. von Ingelheim, E. R. White and W. P. Parks.

Clew Appears In Search for Missing Heir

A new clew in the case of Albert D. Rounds, missing heir sought since 1914, turned up yesterday in the form of a phone call received by Rounds' sister, Miss Elizabeth Rounds, 482221st st. nw., a teacher at Fillmore School.

The caller told Miss Rounds that he knew an Albert D. Rounds now living in Rock Island, Ill. Description of the man tallied with that of the missing brother, Miss Rounds told Special Police Investigator James Bryant of the office of the United States Attorney for the District.

Miss Rounds said she was so excited at the call that she scribbled the caller's name and number down hurriedly and was later unable to decipher her handwriting. Bryant said the caller had read of the case in the newspapers.

Rounds is being sought in connection with settlement of his father's estate, about $1800 of which was left to him.

District Court proceedings were instituted several days ago by Miss Rounds and a brother, Samuel Rounds of Cleveland, to have Albert declared legally dead. The case was continued for a month by Associate Justice Matthew McGuire for further investigation.

Md. Court Is Asked to Rule On Worker's Salary Claim

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8. (AP).—The Court of Appeals was asked today to determine how directly a worker must be involved in a labor dispute to be disqualified from unemployment compensation benefits.

Two appeals prepared for argument involved 480 employes of the American Smelting and Refining Co. and 184 employes of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corp., both of Baltimore.

Counsel for the refinery said compensation payments involved in that case totaled about $175,000. The appeal, which named only Joseph L. Tucker, one worker, was from a Baltimore City Superior Court ruling that claimants were not entitled to compensation from February 4, 1946, until a strike of CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers ended June 19, 1946.

Attorneys for the employes contended they were laid off by the company between February 4 and 25 because of "lack of work." The Baltimore local did not go on strike until the latter day, and other union members who walked out after then are not involved in the appeal.

The company maintained men were furloughed before the strike date because of a walkout at its Garfield, Utah, smelting plant, which cut off supplies of raw material to the Baltimore refinery.

In the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corp., appeal, attorney for the employes contended that failure to cross a picket line of another union in a strike from which they did not benefit should not bar them from compensation.

Foods Planned for Age Groups

Statistics show that the United States population is growing older and the prediction is that by 1975 there will be three times as many persons in this country over 50 as there were in 1920. Research staffs in the food industry are working on processed foods in keeping with consumer demands of older people. Today we know that years do not make people old and that the human machine, if fed right, will remain in good health. Packaged foods for older people, similar to the foods now offered for babies, will probably be next on the shelves.

Cast Your Vote, Truman Tells Women, As Down Payment on U. S. Future

Success of Food Drive Is in Hands of Wives, Says Chief Executive

By Genevieve Reynolds

President Truman yesterday placed the destiny of America and the success of the food-saving drive within the palm of the Nation's housewives.

He delivered his nonpartisan appeal from the Oval Room in the White House as part of a radio broadcast arranged by the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, marking Democratic Women's Day. It was his first party-sponsored broadcast since last spring, when he addressed the Jefferson Day dinner here.

Vigor Is Needed

The President emphasized the need for greater participation by women in the affairs of our country. He urged them to vote in the elections as a demonstration to foreign nations that the citizens in a democracy are interested in the "vigor" of their government.

By going to the polls, he said, they would be making "a down payment on the kind of world in which nations respect one other."

"Women can make an invaluable contribution to the welfare of our Nation—and of the world—by lending their wholehearted support to our food-saving program. Indeed, the responsibility for the success of that program rests very largely with the American housewife. She is an indispensable fighter in our war against hunger. The American housewife has never failed her country when she has been called upon to sacrifice in its interest. I know she will not fail in the great task before us."

Pointing out that the eligible women voters outnumber the men by more than one million, he said, "and yet, when the time comes to register and the opportunity comes to vote, many of our women neglect this responsibility of citizenship.

Other Nations Study Vote

"Foreign nations are deeply interested in the size of our vote," he explained," and the reason is clear. "The United States is the foremost example of Democratic Government in the world. Men and women in other lands are comparing the operation of our democratic system with other forms of government.

"We do not want them to conclude that we are not interested in the vigor of our Government," he continued, "or that we are indifferent to the issues before us. We must prove to them that we take our democracy seriously. They must understand that we accept the responsibilities of our form of democracy as well as its privileges."

President Truman took the occasion, which commemorated the twenty-eighth anniversary of a woman becoming a member of the executive committee of the Democratic national organization, to point out that women "won the right to vote only after a long, hard struggle."

"The women of this country, by recognizing their responsibility to take an active part in the determination of the grave issues of the day, can furnish this type of citizenship."

President Truman said "women want a world in which we sow and harvest the seeds of a good life instead of the seeds of war. You have a great opportunity to make this wholesome influence increasingly effective by the full use of your power at the ballot box."

Declaring that the vote of the women was "insurance that the American people will always be free members of a democratic society," the Chief Executive emphasized, "your vote is your investment in the future of the United States, your investment to insure a country where your children will have opportunities for decent homes, good health, good jobs and adequate education. Your vote is a down payment on the kind of world in which nations respect one another, a world in which nations are good neighbors because they know that good neighborliness offers the only hope of lasting peace."

Speaking on the same Democratic program were three women who delivered brief addresses from their respective homes. They were Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of the late President Roosevelt and copublisher of the Arizona Times, Phoenix, Ariz.; Mrs. David M. Levy of New York, daughter of Julius Rosenwald, noted Jewish philanthropist; Mrs. Phillip L. Crowlie, chosen by the OPA as "the typical American housewife."

'Aw, Dry Up,' Is Good Diet Diction

By Lucia Brown

Just one little martini—minus the olive—adds 135 calories to his total for the day, while a tall glass of bourbon and soda adds 125. A Scotch highball—harder on the pocketbook—is easier on the diet, having only 110 calories.

If, in an absent minded moment, the pride of the family does fall off the wagon, be sure he has his arithmetic handy. For every calorie in his drink, he'll have to lop a food calorie off his day's intake to keep even with the diet.

Drinking a few calories instead of eating them is fairly safe. If this swapping is carried to excess, though, it can be quite harmful. There are no protective nutrients in a highball. If your spouse's diet of food calories falls below 1000 a day, he's walking on dangerous ground.

Beer, 12 ounce can or bottle	115
Manhattan, 1 cocktail glass	135
Old Fashioned, 1 old-fashioned glass	145

There's Hope For Bald Pates

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Bald-headed babies are cute and there seems to be no subtraction from their beauty because of their hairless pates. But, when a child is well into the first year and still remains without a crowning glory parents begin to worry. The ears look too large and the head takes on odd shapes. They went to do something about all of this.

Hair is influenced by the same factors which influence the baby's total growth. A nourishing diet nourishes the scalp and hair along with bones and muscles, cells and tissues. The white rat in the laboratory keeps a glossy coat of hair so long as his diet is at the optimum. Take away some of the essential vitamins or minerals, give him too much starch and not enough protein and his hair begins to tell the story of his deficiencies. It grows lusterless and dry. It fails to grow.

Human hair reacts in the same way to diet deficiencies. It should be expected to grow as the baby adds pounds and inches, and will, if everything is as good as it can be in those meals the baby receives.

Miss Heusler Is Married to Swiss Attache

A reception at the Swiss Legation followed the wedding last evening of Miss Gertrude H. Heusler and Jurg Niehans, commercial attache at the Legation. The Minister and Mme. Bruggmann were host and hostess at the reception, and Dr. Bruggmann also gave the bride in marriage.

Mrs. Niehans is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph A. Heusler of Basle, Switzerland, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Niehans of Berne, Switzerland. The Rev. Crawford W. Brown officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony, which was held in the Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral.

The bride wore a gown from Switzerland, made of white silk with Swiss embroidery. Her long veil of illusion fell from a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and carnations.

Virginia Excitement!

Witty Adele Is Coming To Warrenton

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DOWN WARRENTON way they've been cub hunting since mid September and galloping over the Virginia fields were some very fine young riders. Most of these 'teen-agers have gone back to school but they will be out with the hunt come Christmas vacation.

Most of these kids are second generation stars—there's Joselyn and Arthur Arundel, Joan Patterson and George Eustis, Mrs. Hendricks Eustis' girl and boy; Mrs. George Cutting's son, John Hinckley; Penny Sinclair and Pickens Hamilton whose mama, Mrs. James Hamilton, chairmans the Warrenton Horse Show committee; Jane Baldwin and professionally perfect Eve Prime, who hunts two or three times a week.

Big neighborhood excitement is the impending visit of the Kingman Douglasses. Mrs. D. is no other than the former Adele Astaire whose wit was unimpaired by years of marriage to an English lord and who is taking to her second marriage like that irritating duck takes to water. The Douglasses, by the way, will stay with Mrs. Juan Ceballos, mother of Eve Prime.

The Food Crisis

TUESDAY THERE was quite a crisis over at the State Department. Heaven knows the State Department's used to shattering situations—but this one was unusual because it was gastronomic, not political. A group of important guys, planners of foreign food distribution, were hosting a luncheon for a raft of out-of-towners.

Reservations had been made in a local hotel when some bright boy of thought of asking about the menu. To his horror, the main dish was pot roast!

The hotel, it seemed, had made up menus a week in advance, couldn't toe the Truman conservation line. Imagine if some columnist had spotted State Department food czars wolfing pot roast on a Tuesday. Quickly, fish was substituted for beef and honor saved by an eyelash!

The Princess Departs

THERE WAS A BIG to do at the airport when Iran's Princess Achraf finally flew off to New York on the first lap of her homeward journey. The plane left two hours late and so 50 see-er-offers had plenty of time for effusive farewells. The princess stepped aboard the plane as if it was a magic carpet—with flowing veils, a sprinkling of diamonds and with Tootie, her golden beige Pomeranian, tucked under arm. Following the requisite pace behind were three ladies in waiting and the Iranian court's, gallant master of ceremonies.

During the airport wait everyone kept an eye peeled on kid brother, Prince Hamid—just to be sure he didn't pull a stowaway. The homesick prince is going to get his wish soon—in about 10 days he will be whisked back to Tehran with his handsome elder brother, Prince Abdoraza, as chaperone.

Appeal for Gray Ladies

NOW THAT THE more leisured ladies are beginning to trickle back into town presumably healthy after out-of-doors vacations, the Red Cross is launching a drive to corral some 300 Gray Ladies and Nurses Aides. Volunteering for these jobs won't take too much time, just one day a week, and training while you're already at work.

Two of the Red Cross prize workers are South American neighbors—former Ecuadorian Ambassador Galo Plaza's sister, Allegria Plaza-Lasso, who's assistant captain of Nurses Aides at Gallinger Hospital and pretty Nora Martins who is a most efficient Gray Lady at the Children's Hospital.

Joining the Exiles

ANOTHER EXILE has arrived in Washington to join his political confreres. He is the Slovene agrarian leader scholarly Dr. Miho Krek. This afternoon the Croatian leader, Dr. Machek, who recently rented a house and brought his family from Paris, is giving a small reception for him. To the politically minded these simple parties, given by an assortment of exiles, are extraordinarily interesting affairs. Top flight State Department men attend, military specialists, together with all kinds of citizens from countries behind the Iron Curtain. For once, the much maligned Washington cocktail party comes into its own and serves a really useful purpose.

Rare Antiques Are on View At Tea Party

In a house filled with rare and beautiful antiques collected in this country and abroad, Mrs. Jean Macgregor Frear and Mrs. Marguerite Glover, of New York and Washington entertained at a housewarming tea yesterday at The Questers, their Georgetown home.

Various rooms at The Questers are devoted to specific collections, one showing porcelains and glass, another pewter and silver and copper. A "Collector's room" on the second floor, is furnished completely with furniture, paintings and silver, gathered from England and the Continent, and each piece authentically eighteenth Century. There are no reproductions in the entire house.

Tea was served from a handsomely adorned table set in the paved courtyard at the rear of the house. The courtyard suggests New Orleans, with it's tubs of exotic plants, ivied walls and white wrought iron furniture. Beyond, and a step up from the court-yard, the garden was ablaze with chrysanthemums shading from palest yellow to deep bronze and red.

On the tea table, a centerpiece of autumn flowers, foliage and fruit, carried out the colors of the garden.

Assisting the hostesses were Mrs. Geneva Dunham, Miss Harriet Holther, Mrs. Bessie Richey Dessez, Mrs. Nance Morgan, Mrs. Howard C. Davison, Mrs. Franklin West, Mrs. Arthur C. Davis, Mrs. Paul Cassard, Mrs. Horace Peaslee and Mrs. Detlow Marthinson.

Mrs. James C. Clark, wife of the Attorney General, and Mrs. James L. Houghteling were seen having a chat over the teacups. Others taking tea in the garden were Mrs. C. Benedict Platt, Mrs. Parker Fairlamb, Mrs. Howard Angus, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Gerauld Wright, Mrs. Harry Newman, Mrs. George Maurice Morris and Mme. Thors.

Top Officials Are Guests at Party

The Assistant Secretary of State, Norman Armour, was host yesterday to the chief of staff of the Turkish armed forces, Gen. Salih Omurtak, at a reception at Blair House. The reception was a stag affair at 6 o'clock, attended by 100 top officials of the Army, Navy, and State Department.

In the company were Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff; Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Gen. Carl Spaatz, Air Force Chief of Staff; Lieut. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Assistant Secretary of State Charles E. Saltzman, Stanley Woodward, Chief of Protocol; and George Wads worth, United States Ambassador to Iraq.

By Peggy Preston

CHRISTIAN DIOR, the French fashion creator who has sent American males into a frenzy by virtue of his long skirt decree, arrived in Washington yesterday. But instead of noticing our hemlines, the whimsical Mr. Dior spent the day looking at our skyline.

Last night at the French Embassy where he was guest of honor at a reception given by Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, fashion's man of the hour dismissed the hemline question with a wave of his hand.

"There is no longer any argument about long skirts," said the quiet, almost shy, blue-eyed Frenchman. "They are here to stay. American women have already accepted them."

On the Washington skyline, he was more eloquent, but equally positive. "It is unlike any other city in America," he said in describing his afternoon tour around town. "It is beautiful and charming and has a leisurely grace all its own."

Something like Mr. Dior's own ideas about fashion, eh? Because, no matter how he tried to avoid the subject, eager guests crowded around him to ask questions. Perhaps 100 women and a sprinkling of men were in the small gathering to greet him at the Embassy and Mr. Dior really didn't have a chance to talk about anything but fashions.

In a Dior Original

In the first place, there beside him at the entrance to the drawing room was the always chic Mme. Bonnet, attired in a Dior original. She described it as a "small dinner dress" and there was not a woman in the room who was not filled with envy. It was made of misty dark smoke satin, designed with softly rounded shoulders, tight bodice with wide, low neckline accented with costume gems, and an intricate skirt that was draped over the hips and fell away gently toward the ankles. The length? With a dress like that, one doesn't notice the hemline!

Moving among the guests, wearing another Dior creation, was red-haired Mme. Benard, wife of the First Secretary of the French Embassy. Her's was an afternoon coat of black wool, fitted at the waistline and padded at the hips. Accordion pleated taffeta formed the collar and flared out again from the waist to the hemline. You'd have to see it to believe it.

"He's the most influential fashion creator since World War I's Chanel," said one feminine guest. And many of those present who had attended the Dior fall showing in Paris in August agreed. "Once you've seen his collection, you know it's a waste of time to look at anything else."

The storm of American criticism over the long skirt surprised Mr. Dior who first made hemline news in Paris more than two years ago.

"There is no need to take it so seriously," said the mild-mannered designer. "Fashions change, just as do women's whims."

He believes that New York women are the most receptive to high fashion ideas. But he considers those in San Francisco to be especially well dressed. He had good words also for clothes worn in Dallas and Chicago.

"All American women dress well," said Mr. Dior.

In the crowd around him there were certainly several women to verify his words. There was Mrs. Morris Cafritz in a black moire cocktail frock which followed the "Irene Castle" silhouette, narrow at the shoulders, tight at the waist and the skirt long and tapered. Her pink plumed hat was by Schiaparelli and straight from Paris.

Mrs. Joseph Casey was in a long, pencil slim black dress and her hat was a jersey draped affair from John Frederics. Then there was blond Mrs. Edward Treglown in black satin and Mrs. Robert N. Guggenheim, also in black and a high aqua bonnet.

Mrs. Oscar Cox, an inveterate member of the suit brigade, was there, wearing a black and red checked wool and a small beret type hat, perched over on side of her head.

Greta Kempton, in private life Mrs. A. M. McNamara, who recently completed a portrait of President Truman, has been spending the past few days at the Shoreham Hotel, en route from New Orleans to New York. She will return within the next week to make arrangements for the unveiling and exhibition of the portrait.

Hints of Fashions to Come This Winter

Veil of Secrecy Hides Princess' Bridal Dress

By Robert Musel

United Press Staff Correspondent

London, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—The Daily Express reported today that fashion pirates are seeking to steal the design of Princess Elizabeth's wedding gown, forcing an even tighter security blackout on Britain's biggest civilian secret of the year.

The Sunday Pictorial blamed "American spies" for the attempted style theft.

The Express said that repeated attempts had been made to bribe seamstresses, guards and other employes at Norman Hartnell's fashion salon.

Even tiny details of the princess' dress would be "worth thousands of pounds to international fashion houses, which could prepare their own royal wedding gown model for market well in advance of their rivals," the Express commented.

Security Resumed

The Pictorial said that security precautions as strict as those which protected preparations for D-Day had so far thwarted the unidentified American agents who have been sent to London to snatch the dress pattern.

The Express reported that Hartnell's salon has "direct lines to Scotland Yard," enabling quick mobilization of police to meet any threat.

The newspaper added that "elaborate arrangements" have been made to trap two men who sought to bribe a Hartnell guard "if they entered the salon." However, publication of the plan on the front page of the newspaper having the largest circulation in the world made it seem unlikely that the quarry would enter the trap.

The movie short shows work in progress at only one of the fashion houses which is supplying material for the dress, and the cloth shown in the picture will not actually be used at the wedding, palace sources said.

Girls Send Cake

The veil of security also was drawn over the "official" wedding cake. Outside of the facts that the cake was sent by the Australian Girl Scouts, and that it presumably is edible, no information about the cake will be revealed until it has been cut.

It was announced officially today that Elizabeth has "graciously consented to continue the custom" by which the "worshipful company of gardeners" provides the bridal bouquet for a royal princess. The flower cluster which she will carry to the altar will be made by T. H. Longman, a member of the company.

Members of Britain's famous Guards Regiments taking part in the wedding procession will wear battle dress instead of their gala full dress uniforms, the War Office announced today.

GI's Friend Is Best Dressed In Germany

Weisbaden, Germany (U.P.).—The best-dressed German girl today is the American soldier's girl friend.

She sports American frocks, shoes stockings, lipsticks, rouge, handbags, perfume and other items unknown to her less fortunate sisters. And she is well fed.

The nonfraternizing German girl is easy to pick out from the GI's girl friend. She wears ersatz shoes with wooden soles. The dress she wears is prewar and shoddy. Her face is devoid of makeup.

The GI's girl friend is now almost unrecognizable from the American wives in Germany. She has a Swiss wrist watch, Paris perfume and fancy costume jewelry.

Other German women look longingly in shop windows that are bare except for poor substitute jewelry made of wood or other materials, practically the only luxury items available.

The GI buys luxury items to outfit his girl friend either in the post exchange or has them sent from the United States. Maybe he gets her a job in military government, particularly if he is an officer. Then she gets one meal a day of American food, served in a large central mess, to supplement her German ration.

American wives and daughters get first chance at all feminine items in the post exchanges. But if items are not sold in about a month or two the PX holds a "sale" to clear out the items at bargain prices.

Man Is Besieged by Wife and Mother-in-Law To Drop His Parents From List of Insurance Beneficiaries, as He Has Two Small Children

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is an enlisted serviceman and we have two lovely children. I love my husband dearly, and he seems to love me in his way—but not enough to make me completely happy.

During the war he carried a $10,000 life insurance policy with me as beneficiary; but when the war was over, he told me he thought best to reduce it to $3000, which he did. This was agreeable to me and I didn't intend to discuss it further.

However, my husband still carries another $2000 policy with his parents as beneficiaries; and now my mother has urged the matter on my attention, saying it isn't right for him to carry life insurance for his parents when he isn't rich enough to provide better for his wife and children.

Aims Obstinacy At Mother-in-Law

OF COURSE, I don't look for him to die, and I don't want his insurance for myself in any case, but I should like to feel that he was providing to the best of his ability for the children's security and education, and therefore I think he should change the smaller policy accordingly. Isn't that the right thing to do?

We have had many angry words about this and thinking about it upsets me. Indeed I find it difficult to write on the subject, but I trust you can understand my feelings. If I am wrong in asking my husband to change the policy made out to his parents, I want to know.

He has stubbornly said that because my mother suggested the change, he won't make it. Perhaps it' a case of his being foolishly thoughtless, rather than showing insufficient love for his own little family. Please give us the benefit of your opinions. G. G.

Expert Indorses Wife's Viewpoint

DEAR G. G.: I have reviewed your letter with an insurance counsellor, one of the best, who calls your viewpoint "very intelligent" and raps your husband's purblind attitude toward his children's welfare.

"The consensus thought of reputable insurance counsellors," he says, "is that a married man's first obligation, when creating insurance estate, is to provide, to the best of his ability, for the support and education of his minor children, if any—in the event of his untimely death."

These are his opinions, emphatically stated: 1. If $5000 worth of insurance is all your husband can afford at present, he ought to assign the full amount to wife and children as beneficiaries. 2. However, if he insists on carrying a policy for his parents, he ought to make you contingent beneficiary.

Then, discussing the subsidy-value of a $3000 insurance estate, he points out that if reliably invested at 3 per cent interest—the best you could get—and nursed and disbursed over a 20-year period, it would yield $16.50 monthly, or $198 annual, income, which would hardly amount to a hill of beans in supplying the needs of two minor-age children. An estate of $5000 would be a mite better, yielding $27.50 a month for 20 years.

Man Faces Test Of Good Faith

IF YOUR husband is 30, theoretically he is paying about $25 per annum for the $3000 family policy, which seems a niggardly concession to his dependents' long-term welfare. For $84 per annum, he may continue his $10,000 wartime policy as "term insurance" for eight years from date of first issuance. And surely he can make that investment if his spirit is willing.

Responding to question, the counsellor explains that your husband, by furnishing a signed statement that he is in good health, may reinstate the wartime insurance policy without medical examination or other formality, provided he acts before December 31, 1947.

It's unfortunate that he has his back up about your mother's advices and your wheedling; but if he is essentially disposed to "do right," he should take profit from the foregoing disinterested comment and revise his insurance program accordingly—as proof of good faith, good sense and good character. M. H.

Women Voters Hear

Lower Tariffs Will Lower High Prices

Dr. Michael Heilperin, author of "The Trade of Nations," last night emphasized the need for reduction of United States tariffs.

Addressing representatives of the National and local League of Women Voters, who have gathered here for a two-day work conference on international trade, he declared, "Leadership in world affairs and maintenance of a high standard of living at home depend largely on a radical downward revision of United States tariffs."

The noted economist said that because of protective tariffs the large mass of American consumers now pays a far higher price than necessary for a great variety of goods. "Without such protection some of our producers would have to discontinue all or some of their present lines," he maintained. "Most of them would have to meet foreign competition by giving new proofs of efficiency and imagination."

Inefficient Fostered

"Since competition contributes largely to the vitality of our economy," he continued, "limitation of competition protects our least efficient produers, reduces the variety of goods available to the average consumer and lowers our all-around standard of living."

Dr. Heilperin pointed out that internationally our tariff reduces the ability of foreign producers to sell in the American market, cuts the amount of dollars they can earn and makes them more dependent on our loans. "This backfires on our own economy, for the practical limit of our sales abroad is set by the dollars foreign countries can obtain through sales in our markets or through loans," he explained.

Describing at length the trade negotiations that have been going on in Geneva, Switzerland, since April, the speaker stressed the double stake this country has in opening its markets to foreign goods without further delay.

Women's Role Important

"American women's organizations can play a very important role in this field," he asserted. "Women are the best spokesmen for American consumers. They have the authority of daily practical experience. And a reasonable tariff policy for the United States therefore may depend on their clear understanding of these problems and on their active political support for the contemplated program."

Mrs. Harold Stone, vice president of the League of Women Voters of the United States, presided at last night's session which was attended by approximately 100 delegates and guests from several States.

This conference, which opened yesterday morning in Pierce Hall under the auspices of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, is one of nine being held throughout the country this fall to stress the importance of international trade in the best interest of world economic stability.

A film "Round Trip" and a slide, "The challenge of World Trade," prepared by the National League, were shown at the opening session, which also included a panel discussion on the United Nations machinery for a stable and prosperous international economy, the positions of the United States in foreign trade, reciprocal trade agreements and trade in the emergency postwar trade.

Participating in the panel pow wow were Mrs. Parke Engle, Arlington League; Mrs. Carson Duncan, D. C. League; Mrs. Morris Fussell, Swarthmore (Pa.) League, and Mrs. Francis Russell of Glen Echo, Md.

Kitchen Star Speaks to Club

Two honor guests at the luncheon given yesterday by the Women's Advertising Club of Washington were Mrs. Marjorie Husted, (right) who has made the name of "Betty Crocker" famous in kitchens throughout America, and Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling, chief of the United States Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, who has just returned from a meeting of the nutrition committee of the Food and Agriculture Organization in Geneva, Switzerland.

Mrs. Husted, who is advertising consultant for General Mills, Inc., and headed the "Betty Crocker" kitchen for a number of years, was the speaker at the luncheon. In a talk entitled "What's In a Name?" she told how her company's home economics service has been developed in the 20 years since the name "Betty Crocker" was chosen by a group of young men employes struggling to answer cooking questions.

Among other leading home economists who were guests at the luncheon were Mrs. E. M. Nelson, president, District of Columbia, Home Economics Association; Mrs. Ola Day Rush, director of home economics for the District of Columbia public schools; Miss Frances Kirkpatrick, dean of the College of Home Economics, George Washington University; Miss Marie Mount, dean of Home Economics, University of Maryland; Miss Zelta Rodenwold, editor of the Journal of Home Economics; Miss Essie Elliott of Los Angeles, national chairman of Home Economics in Business, and Mrs. Ann Hagen, who has recently returned from Europe, where she wrote a daily report on "A Woman's Europe" for United Press. Your Questions On Homemaking

1. Can you tell me how to prevent fruit cake from molding? Last year, as usual, I baked it in October and when I looked at it around Thanksgiving it was completely ruined. I have a very good recipe that I wish to continue to use if I can eliminate the molding. I've been advised to use liquor in it and over it, but I don't know what kind nor how to use it.

2. How can I rid our house of little ants without endangering my baby, who gets into everything? W. C. T.

1. It would have been easier to know just what caused the molding if you had mentioned just how you prepared your cake for storing. However, in high humid climates care should be taken to prevent the cake from absorbing moisture from the air and thus adding to the danger of molding. A stone crock makes an ideal storage place, but any closely covered utensil will do. A metal roaster is good or a covered tin box, the cover of which may be sealed with adhesive tape.

Leave cake to ripen in a place where temperature is moderate. Also, chance of molding will be reduced by increasing your baking temperature from 250 degrees F. to 275 degrees F. and cutting down the baking time to 2 to 2½ hours. If you wish, brandy or sherry may be substituted for all or part of the fruit juice in the recipe. And before storing you might dampen a cloth with brandy and wrap the cakes in it.

2. You can get rid of your ants without harming your baby, if you will purchase at a drug store a product for the elimination of ants which is a transparent stick syrup—this you put onto a piece of paper and place where the ants run. Do this before you go to bed at night and remove it the first thing in the morning. Usually only one or two nights of leaving it out are all that is necessary.

Will you please print in The Washington Post how to clean oil paintings? They look like they need a coat of varnish again, but I wondered if the old varnish could be taken off first. They are about 60 years of age. R. S. C.

Since your oil paintings are old, they are no doubt valued family heirlooms and should be treated with care. Removing the varnish on an oil painting is a delicate job and should only be undertaken by an experienced craftsman. I suggest you take them to an art shop to have the old varnish removed and the new varnish applied.

Photographer Of Crash Held Within Law

Baltimore, Oct. 8 (AP).—Attorney General Hall Hammond said today he could find no Maryland statute which prevents a photographer from taking pictures at the scene of a fatal accident provided he does not interfere with officers or obstruct traffic.

The attorney general made his informal comment when his attention was called to a case in Frederick where a freelance news photographer was arrested at the scene of a fatal highway accident early Sunday morning, September 28.

Charles W. Roelke, the photographer, already has demanded $5000 from the mayor and council of Frederick, alleging false arrest by a Frederick city policeman.

The mayor and council denied Roelke's demand and his attorney, General Assembly Delegate C. Clifton Virts, said he would enter suit against the city asking $5000 for false arrest, embarrassment, and damage to Roelke's reputation.

Lieut. Frank K. Dorsey arrested Roelke at the scene of the accident on charges of disturbing the peace, disorderly conduct and interfering with an officer.

The policeman said he was acting on orders from "higher authority." Edwin F. Nikirk, State's Attorney for Frederick County, said the medical examiner for the county had passed on to local authorities a regulation against taking pictures in cases of violent death until they are approved by the medical examiner.

If Roelke and his attorney go ahead with their suit, a court test of the regulation may result.

In his comment today, Hammond said he could find no law which prevents pictures as long as the photographer does not "create a scene or obstruct traffic or violate one of the ordinary laws." Police have the authority, he said, to maintain order at the scene of an accident and keep highways clear.

Oyster War Looms—Legal One This Time

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Forewarning of a legal "oyster war" to be fought within the bounds of Virginia appeared here today.

A summons was issued by the Richmond sheriff's office for Charles M. Lankford, jr., Commissioner of Fisheries, and Attorney General Harvey B. Apperson to appear in Richmond Circuit Court October 20 to answer a petition for an injuction to restrain enforcement of Lankford's order forbidding sale of Virginia seed oysters outside the State.

The summons was served on the attorney general today. It was not learned whether the paper had been served on Lankford.

Asking the temporary injunction and requesting that it later be made permanent will be J. R. Haughton, Cornelius Campbell and the oyster tonger and Seafood Workers Union, No. 265, AFL. A paper attached to Apperson's summons stated that the petition would be filed in Circuit Court October 15 at 10:30 a. m. "or as soon thereafter as can be heard."

The petitioners asked specifically that the commissioner's order on September 23 be declared "invalid, void and of no effect."

They ask that Lankford, as Fisheries Commissioner; and Apperson, wos as Attorney General is "charged with the duty of enforcing the penal statute and laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia . . . be enjoined and restrained from interferring with the purchase, sale and transportation of said seed oysters out of the Commonwealth of Virginia, or from molesting, arresting, prosecuting, or in any wise interferring with your petitioners . . . their agents . . . or members in the purchase, tonging, sale of transportation of said seed oysters . . ."

Haughton was described as a resident of Warwick County who earns his livelihood tonging waters in the tidewater of Virginia and selling and delivering seed oysters. Campbell, a resident of New Jersey, and dealer in oysters, was said to have made a contract September 29 for the purchase of 8000 bushels of seed oysters and Lankford's order, they contend, prevents the carrying out of that agreement.

The union, composed of approximately 500 members who tong oysters on Virginia public rocks and beds, has its headquarters in Newport News.

Two Fined in Maryland

Lankford ordered that sale of seed oysters outside Virginia be stopped October 1 after a public hearing at which a number of tongers appeared in opposition. Among them was J. S. Smith, president of the State Federation of Labor, who spoke as representative of the Seafood Workers group.

The commissioner said at that time that it appeared the supply of seed oysters in Virginia waters, particularly in the James, was not in excess of the demand of planters in the State.

Meanwhile, Leonardtown, Md., town officials revealed that two brothers had been fined a total of $200 for illegal oyster operations in the Wicomico River.

Arrested on the complaint of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, there were Bernard Tippett and J. I. Tippett, both of St. Mary's County, who admitted illegal use of a dredge in gathering oysters. J. I. Tippett, who was listed as captain of the boat on which the dredge was found, was fined $150. His brother was assessed a $50 fine for oystering in restricted waters.

Loudoun Supervisors Refuse State Loan

Leesburg, Oct. 8 (Spl.).—The Loudoun County Board of Supervisors declined to approve an $800,000 State literary loan for construction of a new high school here, when a motion calling for its approval was tabled for lack of a second.

A proposal by School Supt. O. L. Emerick that the loan be approved was opposed by a number of citizens, who expressed their objections to any projects which would place "a heavy debt on the county at this time." The unseconded motion for approval was made by Supervisor D. C. Shands.

William H. Cockerille, assistant county farm agent for a number of years, was appointed county agent to succeed J. R. Litner, who retired several weeks ago.

Tomlinson, Matoaka, Division 4, and Hugh Allen, Petersburg, Division 5. The convention voted to leave selection of next year's meeting site to the executive committee.

Doctor Wins Appeal In Suit for $25,000

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Dr. Foy Vann, Norfolk, was granted an appeal today by the State Supreme Court in a case in which two persons had been awarded $25,000 damages in a suit against him.

Arthur Gardner Harden, a minor, and his father, Ernest R. Harden, jr., filed the suit in Norfolk Law and Chancery Court. Testimony showed that the youth broke a leg while playing football in October 1944. Dr. Vann, a bone specialist, attended him. The youths leg was amputated in June 1946.

Ringling Estate Litigation Nears End in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla. Oct. 8 (AP).—Eleven years of negotiations and litigation over the 20 million-dollar estate which John Ringling left largely to Florida neared an end today.

The State cabinet signed agreements which, if approved by the court tomorrow, will set up an endowment of $500,000 cash and $750,000 in a 4 per cent mortgage to support and develop the Sarasota Ringling Art Museum and the neighboring circus magnate's home, which already are under State ownership.

The cash and mortgage will be given by Ringling Enterprises, Inc., newly formed syndicate composed of John Ringling North and his mother, Ida Ringling North, the executors, and their attorneys.

The syndicate will acquire extensive Sarasota County real estate, 30 per cent of the stock in the Ringling circus which North heads, sizable Oklahoma oil interests, and other holdings of the Ringling estate.

Dutch Criticised In U. N. Debate

Lake Success, Oct. 8 (AP).—Poland accused the Dutch today of issuing "a proud war communique" rather than attempting to settle their conflict with Indonesia, and joined India in support of a Soviet move to order forces in the East Indies withdrawn to their midsummer lines.

Polish Delegate Juliusz Katz-Suchy spoke before the Security Council in an inconclusive debate which was adjourned until 10:30 a. m. (EST) Thursday. He urged the council to take "much stronger action" than it had in issuing the cease-fire orders last August.

Russians Reported Taking U-Boat Yard

By the United Press

Russia is carrying off Germany's main submarine assembly yard on the Baltic Sea and its technicians and builders as well, it was learned yesterday.

It was believed that the submarine yard was being removed from around Peenemuende, Germany. The yard was supposed to be capable of producing 10 submarines a month and to have turned out half of Germany's underwater fleet.

According to captured German documents, the model 21 has more than twice the speed of any existing American sub and can sail underwater for 22,000 miles.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

All Modern Improvements in This New Project

Every time I print what I consider an unusual baby announcement I get a lot of letters telling me it's old stuff. But I'll try once more.

Esther E. Ainsworth of 123 Webster st. nw. forwards an announcement she received from that well-known carpenter, William H. Eyster of 1880 Ontario pl. nw.

We learn that he claims credit for being the architect, while wife Harriette is the builder. Size and weight of baby Linda Gail are listed as "dimensions," and the crowning touch is the listing:

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Inasmuch as this is our first eggless Thursday, permit me to suggest an alternative for your breakfast this morning.

Why not try a heaping bowl of that old favorite "Shhh."

For those who haven't already tried this amazing new-type breakfast food, let me explain that "Shhh" is guaranteed not to crackle, crunch, pop, bubble, or explode.

It just lies there quietly and lets you eat it.

NEW TREND?

"A beautifully poised basic dress designed especially for women."

OBSERVATION

If you are tall and slim and svelte
The "new look" flatters you.
But general observation shows
That your type's all too few.
Peggy.

INFORMATION, PLEASE

John W. Willis of 1728 Massachusetts ave. nw., observes that there are 12 manholes in the intersection of 18th and L sts. nw., and a few more nearby. He wonders why.

I dunno—maybe the contractor made the Commissioners a special rate on a dozen.

MAN AT WORK

Thanks for all those suggested names for our Weatherbird.

As you can see from the cartoon, Papa Dave Groves is still burrowing his way through a stack of letters.

As soon as he makes up his mind, we'll have an announcement.

R. I. P.

Mrs. W. E. Mooney of 809 C st. sw. brings us this news of a ubiquitous local planter:

MEMORY

The building at 6th and the Avenue nw. still carries the sign, "Atlantic Coast Line," on its corner—a reminder of the days when one caught the trains there.

POLITICAL JOKE

J. C. Runyon of 503 N. West st., Falls Church, Va., suggests:

"If you're going to name your Weatherbird after the Governor of New York, spell it: "Do He?"

Grin and Bear It

"Frankly, we need some one to act as a sort of goat around this office—Think you can qualify?"

Leonard Lyons

Wallace Stands By to Open Fire

NEW YORK—Cookie Lavagetto, whose pinch hit in the ninth inning won Friday's game for the Dodgers, immediately was offered a high-salaried off-season job by Herman Kahn of Consolidated Products. Lavagetto accepted it.

Henry Wallace will not deliver any prepared speeches during his trip to Palestine. He'll concern himself with Palestine's farming problems. But, if, by the time he returns, the State Department doesn't support the U. N.'s majority report on Palestine, Wallace will attack the Administration for it.

Jerome Zerby, the society cameraman who abandoned his career to join the Navy, is back doing photography. It was Zerbe who, once, at a theater opening, turned his camera away from the then Governor Lehman and explained, "He's not Harper's-Bazaarish." Then he photographed Joe Donohue IV, saying "The 'IV' of anything IS Harper's-Bazaarish."

Joe Lilley of the Skouras organization is getting a leave of absence to work in Washington for Food Conservation Committee. Lilley took an eight-month leave last year to work abroad for UNRRA.

Backstage at the hit shows these days the casts participate in a number of activities to enliven the routine which otherwise becomes boring. In some shows the actors have a daily pool on the night's receipts—the winner being the one who, after his first entrance, makes the closest estimate on the total receipts. This type of pool for a while augmented the income of Hiram Sherman in "Swing Out the News." Sherman's first appearance was via a wire which lowered him slowly from the top of the theater—so slowly that he could count the empty seats both in the orchestra and in the balcony and make his estimate close to the box office report.

George Jessel, producer of the new Edmund Goulding picture, "Nightmare Alley," sat in his office studying the cost sheets of the movie. One of the studio executives said: "This figure is wrong. Where'd you learn about figures, anyway?" . . . "Not in any grammar schools," replied Jessel. "I left school to join Gus Edwards' revue, and he taught me about show business and show-business figures. Because whenever I'd miss a cue, Gus made me stand in the corner and then write, 500 times, 'How was the balcony business today?'"

Lionel Gelber, the political adviser for the Jewish Agency for Palestine, is a Canadian who was educated in England under a Rhodes Scholarship. During a recess at Lake Success, Gelber went to the U. N. cafeteria, where he heard a man say, in accents as British as his own, "Do you mind if I sit here?" . . . "Not at all," replied Gelber—and introduced himself. "The Jewish Agency? I'm the Egyptian delegate," said the man. "How embarrassing." . . . Gelber assured him that despite their conflicting views on Palestine, they still could break bread and discuss—well . . . er . . . not Palestine but . . . say . . . er . . . the English schools they both had attended.

Maurice Evans, whose production of Shaw's "Man and Superman" opened last night, first planned it three year ago. He wrote to Shaw and suggested Celeste Holm of "Oklahoma!" for the leading role of Ann. "Ann is very important. I am out-of-date in casting," replied Shaw. "Never heard of Celeste or Oklahoma!" The latest Ann I can think of is Isabel Jeans."

Herman Mankiewicz is catching up with a lot of reading. He read no war news during the war, explaining: "I'd rather wait until it comes out in book form."
